Firemen With Safety Net Ready for Catch

Dwyer Pleads Guilty, Gets Life

Maniac Back In Hospital; Periled 7

Nursing wounds suffered in a 25-foot fall, Ernest Zeoli, 45, was back in Mattapan State Hospital today after causing an uproar in East Boston last night when he threatened to kill his wife and six children with a meat cleaver.

While their horrified mother watched in a crowd of 500, tear gas shocked spectators in the street, some of the younger children were dropped into a firemen's net. The older ones leaped themselves, one son with a three-year-old brother in his arms.

Holding his two youngest children as hostages while standing on a roof outside a second story window of their home in Webster street, Zeoli had withstood for an hour efforts of police to capture him.

Fighting desperately against capture by a squad of police, Zeoli threatened to kill the remaining children if any leaped into the net. They escaped when the crazed man's attention was distracted momentarily.

Pleas of his family, neighbors and police had failed to move him and tear gas and threats brought only a barrage of a milk bottle, hammer, wrench and bed boards which injured slightly two officers.

While 500 spectators were in the street, few of them actually saw

Green, Lewis Mum After Long Talk

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (INS)—The first joint peace parley between the rival labor generals—William Green of the A. F. of L. and John L. Lewis of the CIO—ended today in what Lewis described as:

"All we had was general conversation. No conclusions were reached."

To which Green echoed:

"We had a very interesting discussion, but we have nothing more to say now."

TO RESUME PARLEY

Both Lewis and Green said after a meeting of two hours and a half that the conversations would continue later this afternoon.

When Green was asked whether "any progress" had been made toward settling the long-standing and bitter differences between the A. F. of L. and CIO, he replied:

"Again I say, we had a very interesting discussion."

QUICK PEACE DOUBTFUL

They posed (separately) for a small army of photographers, and then went to their respective offices for lunch.

The executive council of the A. F. of L. will meet tomorrow and have an opportunity to consider any agreement reached by Lewis and Green.

It was felt in some circles, however, that a quick peace settlement was doubtful because of the wealth of details under consideration.

Boy Slayer Of Couple Shifts Plea

Composure Breaks, He Weeps in Cell After Sentence

South Paris, Me., Dec. 2 (AP)—Paul N. Dwyer, 18-year-old high school youth, reversed his innocent plea today to the slaying of Dr. James C. Littlefield and pleaded guilty to murder.

He was sentenced immediately to life imprisonment.

The plea came shortly after the Oxford superior court reopened for the third day of his trial.

Dwyer, also accused of the strangling of Dr. Littlefield's wife and transporting bodies of both on a six-state "death tour" to North Arlington, N. J., entered his plea before Judge George Emery as he stood erect between his counsel, E. Walker Abbott and Peter MacDonald.

COURT OPENING DELAYED

He will serve his sentence in the state prison at Thomaston.

It was not until the youth had been returned to a cell in the Oxford County jail that his composure broke. Unemotional, and at times sullen since his arrest in New Jersey, he entered the cell and wept profusely for several minutes.

Counsel had delayed opening of court for a half hour in a conference with Judge Emery before the plea was entered.

When Judge Emery entered the courtroom the jury had not been seated. He informed counsel for both sides of the impending plea.

Then addressing the slim, pale Dwyer, he declared:

"I now am informed you have consulted with your attorneys and desire to retract your plea of

Mellilo Released To Browns by Sox

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 2 (AP)—The Boston Red Sox today released the veteran Oscar Melillo to the St. Louis Browns, where he will serve as a coach and the Cincinnati Reds signed Hank Gowdy of the Bees as coach.

Melillo's release to the Browns was outright with no cash involved, said Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox.

Dever Takes Charge In Revere Cleanup

BULLETIN

Attorney General Paul A. Dever told the Boston Evening American today, following the conference of officials in Governor Hurley's office, that he (Dever) has "now assumed direction of the investigation of Revere." He said a formal statement regarding the conference would be issued later.

The full strength of the State Police was thrown into the Revere cleanup of gangland racketeering today.

State detectives and state troopers were ordered into the purge by Public Safety Commissioner Paul G. Kirk at the request of District Attorney William J. Foley and with the approval of Governor Hurley.

This astonishing move was District Attorney Foley's answer to those who questioned the jurisdiction of Captain James T. Sheehan's squad of Boston police "racket busters" assigned to the clean up by the governor and district attorney following the murder of the Revere gambling king," Louis Gaeta.

ATTACK POLICE POWERS

Foley moved even as Captain Sheehan's jurisdiction was being questioned in the courts.

The district attorney went secretly to Commonwealth Pier and there conferred with Commissioner Kirk, asking co-operation of the state police "as an organization." Kirk acted immediately.

State Detective Captain John F. Stokes was assigned to command the investigation by detectives. State Trooper Captain James P. Mahoney was ordered to command the unit of troopers.

A short time later Attorney General Paul A. Dever summoned Boston and state officials working on the Revere racket cleanup to the State House for a conference with Governor Hurley.

The conferees met in Dever's office and then moved on in a group to the executive offices.

In the conference were Governor Hurley, Dever, Assistant Attorney General James J. Ronan, District Attorney Foley, Assistant District Attorney Garrett Byrne, Public Safety Commissioner Kirk, Captain Stokes, Police Commissioner Timilty and Captain Sheehan.

In ordering state detectives and state troopers into the Revere purge, Commissioner Kirk said they would probe all phases of lawlessness in the beach town.

They will work hand-in-glove with Captain Sheehan's

Farm Bill Revision Sought by McNary

Says Act Violates Roosevelt Pledge to Farmers in Recent Tour

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2—A Republican move to send the much-criticized Senate farm bill back to the Agriculture Committee for complete revision was made today by Senator McNary (R.), Oregon, the Republican leader.

McNary made the informal motion after he asked that a letter by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace condemning the general features of the measure be read before the Senate. The letter was sent to Senators Pope (D.), Idaho, and McGill (D.), Kansas, sponsors of the bill.

"At that time," McNary said, "the President stressed that any farm legislation would be based on a voluntary crop control measure, but here we have one that is almost compulsory in all its provisions. In view of this, I am sure this is not the kind of a bill that the President wants."

BLASTS HASTE

McNary also criticized the haste in which the bill was drawn and pleaded with the Senate to recommit the bill and "proceed more slowly with such an important question."

He declared that it would be "unwise" for the Senate to approve a bill that is not in accord with the views of the Secretary of Agriculture.

While the Senate wrangled, the House was wrangling over its own—and different—bill.

Chairman Johns, of the Agriculture committee, said the House bill will not cost more than half a billion dollars now appropriated under the Soil Conversation Act. But it may cost more, he conceded, when John provisions begin to operate.

QUESTIONS COST

Representative McCormack (D.) of Massachusetts raised the question of cost. He announced he would oppose processing taxes to finance the farm program.

Passage of a comprehensive housing bill would slash the government's burden of caring for idle workers, Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, told the Senate Banking committee.

Describing the Wagner-Steagall measure as a "good bill," Jones said its cost to the government "should not be anything if it is administered properly," and added:

"I don't think this bill will cost the government as much as idleness if you don't pass it. This measure should put many persons to work."

The bill was described as both financially sound and constructive by Chairman Marriner Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board before the House banking committee.

He urged Congress to put "few strings" around the program, because the government is anxious to get construction under way.

Senator Vandenberg (R-Mich.) came to the support today of President Roosevelt's proposal to reduce federal spending for highways.

The Michigan senator, in a letter to State High Commissioner Van Wagoner of Michigan, said:

"I cannot put myself in the equivocal position of advocating economy in the abstract, and deserting it in the concrete."

Fund for Ocean Flights Urged By Kennedy

U. S. Should Prevent Foreign Control, Congress Told

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (AP)—Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy of the Maritime Commission urged Congress today to give prompt financial aid to the development and operation of transoceanic air service to prevent it from being controlled by foreign interests."

Testifying before the House Merchant Marine Committee, on legislation recommended by the commission for rehabilitation of this country's merchant marine, Kennedy advocated immediate assistance for across-the-ocean aviation "as a new aid to the foreign commerce of the United States."

"Present and future economy dictates prompt action," he said. "Assistance to a small degree now, before foreign airlines have preempted the field, as they threaten to do, will undoubtedly firmly establish American operators and prevent transoceanic air service from being controlled by foreign interests, as has previously been the case in steamship service and international cable service."

Turning to the merchant marine proper, Kennedy declared there was need for immediate legislation to create a mediation board to handle labor disputes in the industry.

"Unless something can be done to reduce interunion friction, to increase the efficiency of crews and to restore order and discipline aboard our ships, all of the government's efforts to develop a strong American Merchant Marine will be futile," Kennedy said.

Labor relations in the shipping industry, he added, have "long been characterized by an unenlightened attitude on the part of both employer and employe."

Wage Bill Deadlock Is Broken

All N. E. Democrats Line Up; Texan's Pen Brings Action

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (AP) — The House leadership broke the prolonged deadlock over wages and hours legislation today when each 48th member signed a petition to force a vote on the measure by mid-December.

Representative Mansfield (D.), of Texas, rolled up on his wheelchair to be the final signer, amid a roar of cheers.

They were preceded by Representatives Connery (D.), of Massachusetts, brother of the late William P. Connery, co-author of the bill; Kennedy, Gambrill and Goldsborough, all Maryland Democrats, and Champion and Weeks, Illinois Democrats.

N. E. DEMOCRATS SIGN

With the signature of Representative Connery to the petition, all of the New England Representatives from Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts were listed as supporting action to force a vote.

Connery, who introduced a labor bill of his own providing for a mandatory 40-hour maximum week and 40-cent minimum hourly wage, said he believed the only way to get the Administration bill passed at this session was to support the petition.

He opposes the five-man administration bill, now before the House pending bill, and the lack of mandatory wage and hour provisions.

Representative Dowell, the only Massachusetts Republican to sign the petition. Representative Martin (R.) of Massachusetts explained he could not sign, because he is a member of the rules committee which has blocked the bill since last session.

CHARGES "DEAL" ON BILL

Before the 218th signature was added the House heard a Republican demand for investigation of statements that backers of the wage-hour bill "swapped everything but the Capitol" to insure a vote on the measure at the special session.

Representative Fish (R.) of New York asked for the inquiry because, he said, of statements attributed to Representative Dies (D.) of Texas, a leading opponent of the wage-hour bill, and Representative Robertson (D.) of Virginia.

The inquiry resolution was defeated on a roll call vote, 281 to 94.

After the petition was completed, Chairman Norton (D.) of New Jersey, of the labor committee and other backers of the bill moved to shake the hand of Mansfield, who for many years has been forced by illness to use a wheel chair. It was minutes before the House calmed down.

SEC Head Mum On New Aides

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (INS)—Chairman William O. Douglas declared he doesn't know a thing about the reported impending appointments of Jerome Frank and John W. Hanes to the Securities and Exchange Commission. The President fills S. E. C. vacancies.

Douglas' telephone jangled constantly following Wall Street forecasts of the naming of Frank, former general counsel of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, and Hanes, a partner in the brokerage firm of C. D. Barney & Co.

The vacancies arose from the resignations of former Chairman James M. Landis, now dean of Harvard University Law School, and J. D. Ross, now administrator of the Bonneville Dam authority.

Fist Death Girl Freed Under Bond

Her father, Robert O'Connor, supplied $5000 bail nearly 24 hours after the court had fixed that amount for the girl's release from the jail where she has been held since her arrest.

Local Line Runs Buses Again as Strike Ends

Drivers Win Raise In Pay; Arrest 7 Rioters Here

The Greyhound bus lines today resumed service after settlement of a week-long strike which saw violence in 16 states.

Pay increases averaging $15 a month for drivers were contained in a pact drawn up at the line's Cleveland headquarters, after which the word was flashed to all cities to resume schedules at midnight.

Boston runs for the early morning had been cancelled but the regular New York bus left Park square at 6:30 a. m.

The strike in the Boston area reached its most serious stage shortly before the agreement was reached at Cleveland.

Complaints against 12 men, three of them still under treatment at City Hospital, were issued today in West Roxbury Court by Judge Bert Holland, charging the 12 with being concerned in an affray, as the result of a wild riot yesterday in West Roxbury.

Former District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien appeared to represent seven of the men, accused to be bus company employes; Attorney Thomas Creed represented four more and Attorney Isadore Blum was counsel for the 12th.

The three yet in the hospital, but charged, were named as Robert E. Banks of Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester; David E. Francer, Lucerne street, Dorchester, and Michael Byrne, Syracuse, N. Y.

Pleading not guilty in court and each held in $200 personal recognizance for a hearing January 18 were the following:

Sidney M. Cohen, River street, Hyde Park; Leslie A. Waters, Laurel street, Hartford, Conn.; John T. Clancy, Marble street, Springfield; Alexander W. McNeil, Chestnut street, Lynn; Arthur S. Zang, Mitchell road, Portland, Me.; Roy C. Paine, Congress street, Portland; Frank De Lisse, Parkman street, Boston; Elliott P. Price, Wildwood street, Dorchester, and Curtis Searles, Main street, Brockton.

Police in a cruising car followed the bus but at the height the attack were unable to get through a radio message to headquarters. A woman notified the West Roxbury station and part of the mob was rounded up on arrival of four police cars.

Nurse Is Held For U. S. Jury

Says Texan Gave Her Car Seized Here

A pretty graduate nurse, Hazel Evelyn BeBride, 29, was held for the grand jury today by Judge Hugh D. McClellan in federal court after she admitted driving "somebody's car" all the way from Atlanta, Ga. She is charged with transporting a stolen automobile from one state to another.

Miss McBride who told the court she was from Elmira, N. Y., was arrested in a Boston hotel by Boston police following a tip from Atlanta detectives. She told a strange story.

She said she met a young man "somewhere in Texas" who owned an expensive car and that she drove with him to Atlanta, a trip of about 450 miles.

She refused to name the Texas man, and she testified that she "kept driving north" until she was picked up by Boston police.

Atlanta police did not specify the name of the man who owns the luxurious sedan, for police here said they did not know except that the car belonged to "somebody prominent" in Atlanta.

Chinese Laundry Clue to Car Victim

Through a Chinese laundryman, Medical Examiner Timothy Leary was hopeful today of learning the identity of a man killed in an automobile accident in Roxbury, Nov. 4. A laundry check found in a pocket is marked "E-C-3A." Under this "E" is the letter "K."

Czech Trade Pact Parley Due; Lodge Seeks Delay

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (AP)— The State Department will begin formal negotiations next week with representatives of the Czechoslovakian government for a trade agreement, with shoes an important topic for discussion.

Four government representatives from Prague will arrive in this country Saturday.

Senator Lodge (R.), of Massachusetts, urged the Senate finance committee today to hold hearings immediately on his proposal to halt the reciprocal trade agreements program until its effect on business could be determined.

Lodge, in a letter to Chairman Harrison (D.), of Mississippi, said "a breathing spell" should be provided for at least a year, "in order that Congress and the country may have opportunity to determine the affects upon our industry and trade from the operation of the 16 agreements already negotiated."

His suggestion came a day after two representatives of the tariff commission left for Czechoslovakia to determine production costs of cemented shoes in that country.

Gen. Johnson Says:

NRA Delays Put First Rift in Deal

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 2—This is No. 2 of a series of three columns, tracing the development of the antagonism and distrust between the business community and the administration. No. 1, yesterday, related the almost cloying sweetness of the 1933 honeymoon—which lasted scarcely a month before a little rift began. The chapter deals with events leading up to the divorce.

The beginning of this rift is not to be charged to the President. When the New Deal began to form, conditions were terrible and all business cuddled up to government in complete co-operation. The prompt steps taken acted by anticipation, dollar-devaluation, the certainty of higher prices for farm products and higher costs in industry, all induced a sudden and tremendous wave of buying.

Most of all, the air was electric with a new hope and courage that had been for three years dead. NRA made 2,785,000 jobs. All prices started sky-rocketing. A palpable boom was under way. The Devil was sick, the Devil a monk would be. The Devil was well, the devil a monk was he." The warmth of the promise of co-operation in NRA, chilled perceptibly in its fulfillment.

The steel code, which was really ready for submission, was unaccountably delayed. The specific promise I had from industry of the very cream of technical and other experts to man the NRA organization was never fulfilled. Delayed proposed codes began to carry impossible monopolistic proposals. Suddenly, the insertion of a real wedge in the opening rift was felt. From one end of the country to the other so spontaneously as to suggest concerted action, there was a tidal wave of organization by management, of company unions.

Due to a flaw in the law, these were not forbidden, by its letter, if they were the free and uninfluenced choice of employees, but that was almost never the case. The movement clearly violated the spirit of 7A of the Act—which all industry had promised to respect in the President's Re-employment Agreement.

The effect was instantaneous. It ripped the early labor-management co-operation and confidence wide asunder. All this chilled the warmth of feeling between the Administration and industry like an early frost.

On the other side, forces within government began to act up. All the food industry's codes had been taken out of NRA, and put in AAA—which didn't like any part of NRA. It was opposed to labor's pretensions. It regarded the industries as a ravening pack of conscienceless and crooked wolves—and made that regard perfectly evident in every conference. There was centered the nest of pink, young amateur Kerenskys with whom George Peek wrestled, and several of whom Chester Davis finally purged.

But they were not purged soon enough to prevent their sabotaging their part of the Recovery Act and throwing in to all business a real fear of a governmental intent to Hitlerize or Stalinize industry. The things that were said and done—or rather not done—in those conferences and related with growing exaggeration, caused thousands of business men to tag all the New Deal with this unauthorized nonsense, and to begin to see the whole governmental sky dark with goblins' wings.

There was a similar inter-departmental sabotage. The Recovery Act specifically authorized co-operation with industries with governmental participation and regulation. To that extent the anti-trust acts were amended. The Federal Trade Commission simply omitted to concede the amendment. It continued to harass and threaten industries for doing precisely what the President had authorized them to do under the Recovery Act.

The President could never make up his mind where he stood in the cross-fire. Business, bewildered and embittered, charged a lack of faith. All these causes, with plenty of blame on both sides, by March, 1934, had shattered the sweet peace of June 1933, and headed the honeymoon for Reno.

Tomorrow will be discussed the transition from this stage of mere mutual resentment to mutually meditated revenge.

'Exempt Classes' Tax Discussed In House

Subjection of Million U. S. Employes Considered

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (INS)—The House Ways and Means tax subcommittee today considered proposals to subject 2,600,000 state, county and city employes to the federal income tax.

The discussion carried with it subjection of 2,100,000 federal government employes to income taxation.

The problem of "exempt classes"—widely discussed throughout the country in the past year—was canvassed with Treasury experts.

Chairman Vinson (D) of Kentucky of the subcommittee said that no decision was reached. Other members indicated that it was doubtful whether any action would be taken.

15 MILLIONS YEARLY

The federal treasury, it was estimated, could pick up $15,000,000 in revenue each year to help run the government by this method. The taxes would take about $7,500,000 from federal workers.

Allied with the problem is taxation of tax-exempt securities. Treasury experts hold that the federal government could gain $70,000,000 revenue each year by requiring holders of tax-exempt securities to include interest in their incomes.

In an effort to gain revenue to offset losses through proposed revision of the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes, the subcommittee approved changes in the federal estate and gifts taxes designed to pick up $15,000,000 a year for the treasury.

This would be accomplished by changing exemptions. Under present law a man can give away $40,000 without paying gift tax and also $40,000 of his estate is tax-exempt. The sub-committee combined the two, limiting the exemption to $40,000 for both.

LEVIES ON GIFTS

The sub-committee also proposed to reduce from $5000 to $3000 the individual gifts which can be made exempt from gift taxation. Under the law, it was explained, the amount of individual gifts over $3000 would apply on the $40,000 exemption.

Roper Backs Revision Of Tax Structure

CHICAGO, Dec. 2—Business found support today from Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper in its demand for a revision of the country's tax structure.

Over-taxation of the entire tax structure was listed as a national need by the secretary, in an address before the Business Advisory Council here.

General revision should be undertaken, he said, to simplify the determination of tax liability, to distribute the tax burden more equally and to broaden the base of taxation.

He said the railroads may expect encouraging federal action and that the Interstate Commerce Commission "fully appreciates the need for immediate treatment of proposed rate increases."

Dwyer nodded and in an almost inaudible voice answered:

"Yes."

The court asked the boy whether he understood the penalty, whether his retraction was made "of his own free will" and "fully and unrestrainedly . . . "without mental reservation" or "hope for compromise."

As before, Dwyer nodded and almost whispered:

"Yes."

To the court's final question as to whether he desired to make any statement before sentence was pronounced, the boy said:

"No, sir."

Judge Emery then sentenced the youth to prison "for your entire natural life" at hard labor and remanded him to the Oxford County Jail in the same building.

The boy's mother, Mrs. Jessie Dwyer, Hebron nurse, sitting a few yards away with her friend and counsellor, Rev. James G. Burns of Hebron, displayed no outward emotion as sentence was pronounced on her son.

The end came today as Police Chief George Shippee of North Attington, seventh state witness, was ready to resume his testimony.

Over defense protests, an alleged confession Shippee said Dwyer made in North Arlington was entered as evidence before court adjourned late yesterday.

Dwyer, who Shippee said confessed slaying the elderly physician because of a remark about an "old girl," and strangling the doctor's wife, Lyria, two days later, when she guessed her husband's fate, had a long conference in the sheriff's office with his mother shortly after he was returned to his cell.

It was Mrs. Dwyer's only chance to speak with him before he was taken to prison. The conference was private.

Maine has had no capital punishment law for many years. After the boy was arrested in North Carlington, Shippee testified yesterday, the police chief asked him if he realized he was "liable to burn." Shippee quoted Dwyer as saying then there was no capital punishment in this state.

Million Sought In Queer Tangle Of Marriages

Woman, Wed 3 Times, And Husband Try to Keep Suit Secret

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (INS)—Stranger than the contents of a fiction writer's file, a weird assortment of facts tumbled out in supreme court today, where a woman who has married three times, twice to men already blessed with wives, sought to collect $1,000,000 from the second of these husbands.

Principals in the unusual tangle are Mrs. Marion G. Allgeyer, now wife of a prominent Louisiana physician, and Howard E. Spaulding, said to have inherited $2,000,000 from his parents.

Cast in a supporting role is "Sanford Clarke," identified as a banker, married and a father.

Basis of the suit is an asserted promise by Spaulding to give $1,000,000 to the woman he married while both were already wed, when he should inherit the fortune.

PRIVACY SOUGHT

Both sought privacy in trial, because neither Mrs. Allgeyer's third and "real" husband nor Spaulding's original and "real" wife were to know of it.

Testimony brought out that "Clarke" was the woman's first husband. On a business trip to Chicago the banker met her, wooed her and they "eloped" to Waukegan, Ill. That was in November, 1923.

"But the day after we were married he was cruel," she testified. "He slapped my face and pinched me. He had a habit of pinching me."

It further developed that in January, 1924, "Mrs. Clark" began divorce proceedings, and when the action was tried, the banker, under his own name, appeared as her chief witness to testify that "Clarke" had been cruel to her.

ELOPES AGAIN

The divorce granted, she was a free agent when Spaulding came into her life in 1925. Like "Clarke," he was on a business trip to Chicago. Like "Clarke," he had a wife back home, and again like "Clarke," it didn't prevent him from a second marriage.

This time the locale of the "elopment" was Milwaukee. Spaulding used the name "Harry E. Sterling." She used "Peggy Gustin."

What happened after that is for the courts to decide. Spaulding claims his bride of two months threatened to prosecute him for bigamy, expose him to his "real" wife. As a result, he says, he signed the agreement to turn one million dollars to her after his parents died.

ACTION IS FILED

Last year Spaulding's parents died, and Mrs. Allgeyer accepted something like $500,000 on his representation that the estate had shrunk. Subsequently suspecting that the estate was not as small as he represented it, she filed suit based on the million dollar agreement.

Spaulding in counter action has demanded return of all monies he gave Mrs. Allgeyer, and in addition claims that she knew he was married when they went through the marriage ceremony.

In 1932 she married her present husband. They have one child. All he has known of the present affair, she testified, was that "I might have to go to New York some day to make a settlement with my former husband."

Son Missing, Lawrence Woman Is Prostrated

LAWRENCE, Dec. 2—Prostrated by grief and worry over her missing son, Mrs. Henry Lister of Greenfield street, South Lawrence, was under a doctor's care today while Wisconsin police continued to search for a 18-yearjold Norman Lister, missing frm the University of Wisconsin since Saturday.

University officials said that when the college freshman vanished, he left a note intimating that he was returning home.

Today, however, the Rev. Archie Crowley, rector of Grace Episcopal Church, here, and spokesman for the Lister family, said the mother received a letter Tuesday in which the boy declared he was leaving college to find a job.

The letter amazed his father and mother, inasmuch as his previous weekly letters were in a cheerful vein and he had given no hint that he was dissatisfied.

Young Lister was graduated last June from Lawrence high school, where he had an excellent scholastic record and where he played for two years on the football team.

Since his mid-high school days he had expressed a determination to study for the Episcopal ministry, the Rev. Mr. Crowley said today.

Death Probe Continues

As the funeral of Joseph J. Arena, "death cocktail" victim, took place today at St. Paul's Church, Roxbury, Capt. John F. McCarthy, head of the homicide bureau, announced no evidence to substantiate a foul play theory had been discovered. The inquiry will continue.

Dartmouth Junior Missing Four Days

HANOVER, N. H., Dec. 2 (AP)—The disappearance of John Henry Adams, 33, Dartmouth junior of Dalton, Mass., four days ago, was reported today to Police Chief Dennis J. Hallisey by a fraternity brother, Robert K. Thomas of Garden City, N. Y.

Hallisey said Thomas told him Adams had not been seen in Hanover since he retired Sunday night in the Delta Upsilon house. The chief said a check with railroad employes at White River Junction, nearest railroad station, brought the information a youth answering Adams' description purchased a ticket for New York Monday.

The student is the son of Mrs. Flora Adams, who was unable to account for his disappearance. He is six feet tall, weighs 180 pounds and wears gold-rimmed glasses.

Dr. Henry D. Chadwick, state commissioner of health, today announced that laboratory state tests show that a Portuguese resident of New Bedford has leprosy.

The commissioner said that an agent of the United States Public Health Service will probably go to New Bedford and remove the man to the national leprosy hospital at Carville, La.

The New Bedford leper, who is married and father of three children, is now in voluntary quarantine in his home. He came here from Brazil 20 years ago.

Earlier in the week, daughter Beulah and Niccolo "Nicky" Di Quatrocicchi, sculptor and man about town, were revealed as having slipped away for the double-ring act.

The Hebert-MacFadden elopement date was Nov. 15, and the young folks returned to receive the family blessing. After their honeymoon they will live in Holyoke. Their elopement was the climax of a romance begun when Beverly attended Mt. Holyoke College. Hebert is a graduate of Peekskill Military Academy.

Wife Is Bailed In Knife Death

Manslaughter Charge Sought at Nashua

NASHUA, N. H., Dec. 2—Mrs. Grace B. Davidson, charged in superior court with the knife slaying of her husband, Edgar, was released today under $5000 bail.

Chief Justice Henry Burque's action in granting a petition for bail to the 31-year-old woman, held on a first degree murder charge, climaxed an unusual series of legal maneuvers, in which technicalities prevented the charge from being changed to manslaughter.

Mrs. Davidson is alleged to have stabbed her husband to death after a quarrel in their Gray street home November 20.

County Solicitor Vincent Broderick has indicated he would ask a manslaughter indictment instead of a murder decree when the Grand Jury convenes January 4.

Fear Laconia Official Robbed

LACONIA, N. H. Dec. 2 (AP)—Miss Martha Johnson, Laconia tax collector, today was found unconscious on the floor of her office at city hall under circumstances which puzzled authorities. A check was started to determine whether she had been robbed.

It has been her custom to work all night on December 1, final day for collection of taxes. Her assistant, Miss Susie Lawrence, found her when she reported for work at 8:45 a. m.

Dr. E. J. Gage treated Miss Johnson, who later recovered partial consciousness. Dr. Gage said he was unable to determine whether she had fallen or had been knocked to the floor.

Miss Johnson has been tax collector 30 years. An incomplete audit showed no money was missing.

Son Settles Parents' Suit To Regain Education Cost

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 2 (AP)—A handshake and a kiss today ended a court suit in which an elderly couple sought $8500 from their son, "owing and due" for his education.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Driscoll filed action against Dr. John A. Driscoll, Jr., 30, of the City Emergency Hospital system.

Mrs. Driscoll testified she and her husband told the son, when he was 21, they couldn't afford to educate him further, but if he would repay them they would mortgage their home so he might continue his schooling.

She said her son agreed, and attended Stanford Medical School and Creighton University at Omaha.

The parents mortgaged their home for $1500 and Mrs. Driscoll said they often went without proper food. They said their son obtained a position in 1936, and they waited a reasonable time for repayment before filing suit.

Superior Judge Pat B. Parker remarked the suit should be compromised because "the relationship of a parent to his parents is too precious to jeopardize in litigation." The attorneys then went into a conference.

Roy A. Rogers, attorney for the parents, announced the son had agreed to pay the $1500 mortgage and $2500 extra at $40 a month.

Covered Wagon Days Feted At Ipswich

150th Anniversary Of Ohio Trek Celebrated

IPSWICH, Dec. 2—Ipswich settled back to normalcy today after its most exciting day in many years—observance of the 150th anniversary of the first group of pioneer settlers travelling to Ohio in oxen-drawn covered wagons.

Yesterday was a special holiday by proclamation of the selectmen—the first since Lafayette came here 100 years ago. Business was thrust aside, schools closed and the entire town took part in festivities lasting until early morning.

One feature was the arrival from Hamilton, which at the time of the original trek was part of Ipswich, of a covered wagon, which will leave Friday with mail for Marietta, Ohio, traversing approximately the original route of the pioneers.

The principal speaker was Gen. Charles G. Dawes, former vice-president of the United States, whose grandfather, the Rev. Manasseh Cutler, inspired the westward journey.

Starhemberg Marries Pretty Vienna Actress

PRINCESS VON STARHEMBERG

VIENNA, Dec. 2 (AP)—Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, former vice-chancellor of Austria, and Nora Gregor, pretty viennese actress, were married today in a church ceremony on Kahlenberg, a historic hill rising above the Danube at the edge of Vienna.

The soldier-prince, who might have worn any of a dozen military uniforms, was married in civilian attire. The bride wore a simple gray satin gown.

Over her gown when she walked through a heavy mist and between lines of police into 17th century St. Josef's Church, she had slipped a fur jacket.

The hour and place of the wedding were kept secret until a few minutes before the ceremony.

Kahlenberg is the hill where von Starhemberg's ancestors defeated the Turks in 1683. The church is a memorial to that victory.

'Flannel Foot,' Phantom Thief, Gets 5 Years

For Quarter Century He Joked Scotland Yard on Crimes

LONDON, Dec. 2 (AP)—The man whom prosecuting counsel styled the phantom, "flannel foot" burglar, who eluded Scotland Yard for 25 years, was sentenced today to five years' penal servitude on wholesale charges of burglary.

Prosecuting Counsel Humphreys told the Middlesex sessions court that Williams, who pleaded guilty to 40 charges, was the ghostlike "flannel foot—who usually wore flannel socks over his shoes."

BROKE OUT ONCE

One of the charges against Williams was "burglariously breaking OUT of a house"—but most of the others were for breaking in.

Williams actually faced only six specific charges, but intimated his wish to plead guilty to 34 additional counts.

"Flannel Foot's" frequent use of a bicycle to make a getaway earned him the additional nickname of "bicycling demon."

Police arrested Williams October 29 in Ruislip, West London, after trailing him to an unoccupied house and noticing him enter without gloves and leave wearing gloves.

They said his galoshes tallied with imprints in the gardens of the various burgled houses.

PHONES SCOTLAND YARD

Christmas always was a big time for "Flannel Foot." His usually telephoned Scotland Yard to convey the season's greetings, just to let them know how he was getting along and wish the inspectors luck.

During 25 years of depredations, the elusive thief gave authorities only two periods of rest—during the World War and last Summer, when he took time off for a vacation at Brighton. It is believed he joined up with the British Tommies and did his bit in the war. One of his occasional telephone calls to the Yard was made when he went to Brighton.

"This is 'Flannel Foot'" he said. "I'm going to Brighton for a spell. So you needn't worry until I return. I'll let you know when I get back."

WAS FAST WORKER

That was on June 1. He returned two months later and celebrated with an epidemic of house-breakings.

"Flannel Foot" stole only money, carefully avoiding traceable loot. Sometimes he would take a late train from London to a suburb, steal a bicycle, raid a neighborhood rapidly, and, abandoning his cycle, vanish. Occasionally he left a sock behind.

Last Christmas he called the Yard to wish the boys a happy Christmas and a bright new year. He signed off with a "cheerio."

Surgery to Join Boy and Girl as Siamese Twins

Pair Will Be Grafted Together, Then Cut Apart Again

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (INS)—The stage was being set today at Emergency Hospital for one of surgery's rarest operations.

A 16-year-old Negro boy and a 12-year-old Negro girl will be joined together as Siamese twins.

Their joining together will allow the boy to grow a pound and a half of flesh for the girl, horribly disfigured by burns when he dress caught fire a year ago.

Principals in that operation, which surgeons claim will stand out in medical history if it proves successful, are John Melvin Bonner, 16, a junior high school student here, and Clara Howard, 12, of Edenton, N. C. They are distant relatives, but had only seen each other once or twice in the last 10 years.

INSUFFICIENT FLESH

When Clara's burns healed, her arms were drawn into her side and her chin literally glued to her neck. Since she was brought here, one of her arms has been freed. But the surgeons found she had insufficient flesh to help replace that which was consumed by the flames.

John, who already has undergone operations preliminary to the major task of joining his body with that of the girl, has volunteered to undergo what is known as "the person-to-person grift by the tube pedicle method."

Dr. Robert E. Moran, surgeon at the hospital, said medical literature fails to record any precedent for such an operation.

JOINED LIKE TWINS

Under this method, John will have a quantity of his flesh slit, rolled into an 18-inch tube, and this joined to his body from his left armpit to his waist. Later, when the blood circulation in the tube of flesh is found to be good, the tube will be severed from his armpit and joined to the waistline of the girl.

So joined, the boy and girl will be like Siamese twins. Their systems will function through a single circulatory system.

John and Clara will remain joined several weeks, until their circulation becomes normal. Then the tube will be severed, Clara's right arm will be cut free from her body, and John's pound and a half of flesh used to cover her side, chest, neck and below the armpit.

Dies at Wheel At Stop Light

Thirty-five passengers on a Boston Elevated Railway bus today had a dramatic experience to relate.

Stopped for a red light last night at Prospect and Hampshire streets, Cambridge, the bus failed to move when the light turned green. They whispered among themselves for a few moments, then investigated.

They found the driver slumped over the wheel—dead. He was John Minnell, 56, 165 Warren street, Brighton, an employe of the Elevated since 1912.

Both DiStasios Must Die Dec. 6

Anthony Distasio, 25, must die on December 6 for the murder of Daniel Crowley, West End laborer, the Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled today.

The ruling was, in reality, a double sentence to death since with the younger Distasio will go his father, Frank, 54.

Both were granted a stay by Governer Hurley pending the outcome of Anthony's appeal to the Supreme Court. The elder Distasio has no appeal pending.

Crowley's body was found in a burned automobile belonging to Frank Distasio in May, 1935. The Commonwealth alleged at the trials of the Distasios that Crowley was murdered, his body left in Distasio's car, and the car burned, in a plot to "fake" the elder Distasio's death and collect $20,000 insurance.

Anthony was found guilty of having been an accessory. The appeal was taken to the Supreme Court on grounds that the jury's verdict failed to indicate the degree in which he was an accessory, and that therefore the verdict should be set aside.

Find Two Guilty Of Assault

Sealed verdicts of guilty on a charge of assault and battery on two police officers were returned to Judge Vincent Brogna today in Superior Court by a jury against Francis O'Keefe, 30, of Vale street, and Victor Friedberg, 31, of Mayberry street, both Roxbury.

O'Keefe also was found guilty on charges of assault with a dangerous weapon and illegally carrying a revolver.

The jury returned a not guilty verdict on a charge of assault with intent to murder Police Sergeant William Long of Back Bay station and disagreed on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon against Friedberg.

Assistant District Attorney Edward M. Sullivan, the prosecutor, said Friedberg would be retried on this last charge on December 6.

The charges grew out of an attempt by Sergeant Long, Patrolman Edward Cohen and a third Back Bay officer to arrest O'Keefe and Friedberg in Huntington avenue, Back Bay, last July on suspicion of robbery.

'El' Urges Repeal Of Door Guard Law

In recommendations to the Legislature, trustees of the Boston Elevated Railway Company requested the repeal of the law requiring one guard to every two cars of a rapid transit passenger train. They said repeal of the law would effect a saving of $140,000 annually.

The trustees pointed out that although the law was passed in order to increase safety on rapid transit trains the door accident rate increased from 23.46 per million miles to 27.22 per million miles since the act was adopted by the Legislature.

Storm Sweeping Up Coast to Boston

Winter in earnest was headed for Boston today, according to a warning issued by the weather bureau in Washington, which told of a storm expected to sweep the Atlantic coast from the Virginia Capes to Nantucket.

The storm is centered about 200 miles east-southeast of Cape Hatteras and is moving north-northeastward, and is expected to bring to New England strong northeast winds and moderate gales, with rain and snow.

Await Murphy's Reply to Buckley

Reaction of Comptroller George E. Murphy to State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley's suggestion that the auditor take over the comptroller's duties was awaited eagerly at the State House today.

Buckley recommended to the legislature that duties of the Comptroller's Bureau and the Division of Accounts in the Department of Corporations and Taxation be transferred to the auditor, claiming that all the state's auditing should be centralized in one department.

2 Hold Up Girl With Police Near

With two traffic officers less than 100 yards away and the Back Bay police station just around the corner, two bandits held up a girl clerk today in the office of the Coolidge Dye House, Inc., 88A Massachusetts avenue, and escaped with $8.

The clerk, Miss Rose Laskey of Fernboro street, Roxbury, told Lieutenant Robert Lynch of the special service squad, who rushed from headquarters and the Back Bay police to the scene, that she saw no weapon.

One of the holdup men, she said, held his hand threateningly in his pocket when he walked up to her and said:

"Keep quiet, now; don't be foolish! Give us the money!"

His companion walked over to the till and extracted the $8 it contained, then asked politely:

"Where's the rest of the money?"

"The driver took it at 8 o'clock this morning," the girl replied.

"Hah—I knew it!" exclaimed the bandit.

Then the bandits walked leisurely from the shop and the girl rushed to the telephone.

Bank Chief Urges Longer Loan Period

Bank Comptroller William P. Husband today recommended legislation, extending for two years the period in which the banking department may borrow funds for the payment of dividends in the liquidation of closed state banks. Under the present law the time for making such borrowings expires March 20, 1938.

The commissioner, in his recommendation filed with the clerk of the House of Representatives, stated that the banking department has outstanding at the present time $9,400,000 due to Reconstruction Finance Corporations. This sum has been borrowed to pay dividends to depositors in closed banks.

Maniac Back in Hospital After 7 Escape Death

the climax when, hit in the knee by a tear gas bomb, Zeoli lost his balance and fell into the street. They had been blinded and choked by the gas.

Zeoli, who was due to be recommitted to the Mattapan State Hospital was more irritable than usual as the family of eight were in the kitchen last night. Helen, 6, and Joseph, 3, got into a childish quarrel and Zeoli went berserk.

GRABS CHILDREN

Grabbing the two children, he slapped the girl's face and shook the boy until he cried. The latter child, Nicholas, 19, remonstrated, which further enraged the father.

Dashing into a closet, Zeoli brought forth a meat cleaver. Mother and children screamed and the crazed man threatened to kill all of them. Hearing the shouts, neighbors telephoned police.

When two patrolmen came to the front door, they were confronted by Zeoli, holding the cleaver over Helen and threatening to kill the child if they molested him. Unable to pacify him and fearful for the child's life, the officers left and called for reserves, tear gas and the fire department. They reasoned that an attempt at capture then might endanger the life of the child.

Meanwhile, Zeoli had herded the children into the living room. When the police returned, Mrs. Zeoli took advantage of an opportunity to slip out.

FORCED OUT ON ROOF

As the police hurled tear gas bombs into the living room, Zeoli forced Helen and Joseph out a window leading to a roof. The other children sought refuge from the fumes at two other windows.

Firemen had spread a net and the children were urged to leap, but their father's threat to kill their little brother and sister if they escaped deterred them.

Finally police got into the living room and the children escaped when Zeoli concentrated his efforts on repelling the officers. Phyllis, 12, tossed Anthony, 8, into the net and then jumped herself. Next Mary, 14, carefully dropped Helen and jumped herself. Nicholas leaped with Joseph in his arms.

With the children safe the police began to close in. Finally Sergeant Clifford threw a tear gas bomb at Zeoli. It hit the man in the knee, he lost his balance and plunged to the street, still holding the cleaver. After treatment at the East Boston Relief Hospital he was taken to Matinpan.

State Police Ordered Into Revere

squad to solve the Gaeta slaying, purge the city of its rackets and bring to justice the score or more of shadowy figures whose strange power has made the North Shore beach resort the "Little Cicero" of the East with a record of eleven gangland slayings in 10 years.

All question of jurisdiction was removed by the Foley-Kirk action, and a cleanup was promised on a scale not contemplated even in the assignment of Captain Sheehan and his "untouchables."

FOLEY'S STATEMENT

"Boston police officers in Revere are clearly in their duty in their investigation of a murder.

"The murder, we believe, arose out of some rackets in that city.

"There is no question of the authority of the officers in the investigation of the murder.

"Some question has been raised as to their authority in their investigation of non-felonies. There is authority for the claim that it is necessary for the city or town authorities to request officers to come in from another city or town.

"In this case the persons in whom lie the power to request as above have not only done so, but are questioning the jurisdiction in the matter.

"I have today requested Commissioner of Public Safety Paul G. Kirk to assign the state police to Revere."

SPIKES OPPOSITION GUNS

"Clearly no such question can be raised as to the presence of the state police. Captain Sheehan and his men will also continue their investigation that I had requested.

"Commissioner Kirk immediately granted my request and has ordered the resources of the state police to clean up Revere."

The question of jurisdiction in court was raised by Attorney Sidney Margolis, counsel for Charles Sidd, arrested by Captain Sheehan following a raid Saturday afternoon. Sidd, charged with maintaining a gambling nuisance and setting up and promoting a lottery, was held in $500 for continuance today after he had pleaded not guilty.

In Chelsea district court before Judge Paul J. McDonald, Attorney Margolis moved that the case against Sidd be "quashed" on the grounds that the Boston police, under the statute, had no right to enter Revere and make arrests without the consent of the mayor and city council.

Judge McDonald continued the case until Saturday, ordering Attorney Margolis and Assistant District Attorney Garrett H. Byrne, appointed as special prosecutor in the Revere "wholesale" gambling probe, to file briefs. Arguments will be heard Saturday.

HELD IN $100,000

Prior to the hearing of the Sidd case in court, Michael Kingsley of Vine street, Everett, and Louis Zarinsky of Florence street, Revere, were held in $50,000 each as material witnesses in connection with the slaying of Gaeta, who was shot to death a week ago last Tuesday by one of three men following a heated argument in front of a Shirley avenue, Revere, cafe.

In asking the court that the two men be held as material witnesses, Special Prosecutor Byrne indicated they were in danger of death if released.

"I ask that they be held in $50,000 each in order that the witnesses be protected," Byrne told the court.

"If we allow the two witnesses, who will prove important factors in the government's case in connection with the murder of Gaeta, to go on their liberty neither would be available 10 days hence," Byrne said.

FIGHTS HEAVY BAIL

Attorney William H. Finnegan of Malden, counsel for Kingsley, asked that his client be allowed to go on his personal recognizance, asserting that the witness would be produced whenever the government wanted him. He also argued against the heavy bail.

Zarinsky was not represented by counsel. Both men were to be taken to Charles street jail.

As news of the ordering of the state police into Revere reached the city, Captain Mahoney and Detective Captain Stokes were conferring as to their immediate plans and the number of men to be sent to the resort city.

Suffolk county's investigation into Revere had taken a new turn earlier today when Mayor James M. O'Brien, members of the city council and school committee were asked to appear before District Attorney Foley.

SCHOOL HEADS RAP MAYOR

The conference, it was learned, was instigated by the school committee in a request to the district attorney a month ago as a result of "the failure" of Mayor O'Brien to appropriate funds for salaries, textbooks and supplies as designated in the 1937 school department budget.

From Assistant District Attorney Frederick T. Doyle, in charge of the matter, it was learned that the school committee alleges, in effect, that the mayor did not have the right to slash the school committee budget.

Earlier, in connection with the Revere "racket" investigation, a new probe—that of a $500,000 automobile theft ring—was revealed, coming as a challenge to injection of jurisdictional questions in the "crime-busting" campaign.

Questions of Captain James T. Sheehan's jurisdiction in the beach resort city were raised by a group which claimed the "racket-busters" were limited to solving the nine-day-old gangland slaying of Salvatore Gaeta, Revere gambling king.

This same group reported "difference" over method of procedure between Captain Sheehan and District Attorney Foley, at whose request Governor Hurley ordered the Boston police captain into Revere, and upon which the district attorney commented:

"My orders originally were for Captain Sheehan and his men to 'clean up' Revere.

"Captain Sheehan and his men were delegated by Governor Hurley at my request. This was done to give full state authority to the investigation.

"Those orders have never been changed."

Captain Sheehan said:

"We are working in close harmony and expect to break this entire situation wide open. Reports that we clashed are untrue. I can't understand the basis for it."

It was learned by the Boston Evening American that officials of the attorney-general's office have pointed out to District Attorney Foley that because of Governor Hurley's ordering of Captain Sheehan into the investigation and the presence of state police—Sergeant John F. Horgan—there were absolutely no legal technicalities to hinder Captain Sheehan's "cleanup" of rackets.

STATE POLICE POWER

Even if Revere officials protest the authority of Captain Sheehan and District Attorney Foley to investigate anything other than the Gaeta murder, the question of legality is dispelled by the presence of state police, who have jurisdiction all over Massachusetts," it was learned.

While Captain Sheehan and his squad continued their search for James Preston, sought in connection with the Gaeta murder, in a series of unsuccessful raids, the "grilling" which were at Dracut camps easy today, it was learned that definite arrangements have been completed for Preston's surrender.

His attorney, backing up a statement of Preston's brother that the former would give himself up in a few days, will be Joseph Child, Edward J. Tighe of Revere and the two members of his "vice and rackets squad," Lieutenant Hend, Tracey and Inspector William Gibson, it was learned.

Arrangements for the surrender of Preston, reported on his way to Boston from a mid-western city, were discussed at a meeting last night in a Boston hotel called by East Boston, North End and Revere racketeers, whose sole interest is to "get the heat off" and restore their income which was "shut off" when Captain Sheehan went into Revere, it was learned.

It is understood that a Boston attorney has already been contacted in connection with Preston's surrender and will accompany the latter when he gives himself up.

Reports that Revere was "wide open" again—circulated by the same group that attempted to stir up trouble between District Attorney Foley and Captain Sheehan were branded as "untrue and unfounded" by members of the "racket-busting" squad.

So closed up were the former betting places—clubs, smoke shops, "third" stores—that it was impossible to place a number's pool in the North Shore city.

Even members of Captain Sheehan's squad admitted that it was "practically impossible" to make a gambling arrest although they are proceeding with their investigation of all racketeering conditions in Revere during the past nine years.

Meanwhile, Chief Tighe today reiterated that he would not resign.

"I said on Tuesday I would not resign. I repeat that today."

Captain Sheehan, too, blasted reports that he had told Chief Tighe to resign or face dismissal.

"That report is absolutely untrue," Captain Sheehan declared. "I never had such conversation with Chief Tikhe and the report is foolish, of course."

Other developments yesterday in connection with the Revere "cleanup" campaign and the Gaeta case were:

Revere police and Captain Sheehan, working independently, searched cottages in Wilmington for Preston.

Captain Sheehan searched a number of East Boston houses, the home of Preston's mother in Winthrop and questioned two girls, one a tall, attractive blonde, as to their knowledge of Preston's whereabouts.

A .38 caliber revolver, automatic pistol was found on a Chelsea lawn and was ruled out as the weapon from which the bullets were fired at Gaeta.

ATTY. MARGOLIS

CHARLES SIDD

Charles Sidd, right, arrested by Captain James T. Sheehan and his "racket busters," Saturday, on gambling charges, leaving Chelsea court with his attorney, Abraham Margolis, left, who raised the question of Captain Sheehan's jurisdiction in "cleaning up" Revere, precipitating the ordering of the state police into the beach resort city. Sidd, held in $800 bail, pleaded not guilty. Arguments on Attorney Margolis' motion to "quash" the case against Sidd will be heard Saturday.

20 Escape Death in Sea Crash

Twenty men aboard a Boston fishing trawler narrowly escaped death early today when their vessel was in collision with a freighter 42 miles east of Boston.

Her bow dented, but shipping no water, the trawler Widgeon arrived back at Boston at 6.15 a.m., six hours and ten minutes after the crash with the Portland to Baltimore-bound steamer Charles Christenson.

Most of the crew of the Wild Goose asleep in their bunks, were thrown out by the force of the impact. The captain, Herbert Green, was on deck against the side of the pilot house.

Captain Greene said he had been away from the pilot house for a few minutes when the watch reported sighting the vessel. He rushed back and found the freighter looming a short distance away. Thirty seconds later the crash came.

Radio operators of both vessels reported none of the crew members hurt. Messages were sent to the Coast Guard and the Radio-marine Corporation.

Captain Greene, who said the trawler had left Boston last night for the Grand Banks, said the weather was clear and the sea calm when the accident occurred.

The trawler is owned by the Portland Trawling Company and plies out of the Fish Pier. She is 150 feet long, with a gross tonnage of 414.

The Christenson is registered to the Christenson Steamship Company. She is 409 feet long and has a gross tonnage of 5630.

6 Families Flee Revere Blaze

Six families, including many small children, clad only in flimsy night clothing, were driven from their homes when a two-alarm fire raged in a four-story dwelling at Broadway and Revere street, Revere, early today.

The blaze confined to one half the house, climbed rapidly from its origin in a street floor cafe to the roof. Six other families on the other side of the house were not forced to vacate.

Driven out were the families of Carmen Ianelli and Joseph Natali on the second floor; Janero Cataldo and Henry Landry on the third floor; and Carmen Michelli and Michael Rodiuozzo on the top floor.

Cause of the two-hour fire was not immediately determined.

Gable's Accuser Free, Stays in Jail

SANTA ANA, Calif., Dec. 2 (AP)—Violet Wells Norton, the plump English housewife who told a court she thought Clark Gable was the father of her child, voluntarily remained in jail today, although a writ freeing her arrived yesterday. Her attorney said she desired to remain in jail pending efforts to finance a return to England. She faces possible deportation to Canada.

30-Day Sentence For Hanging Dog

FALL RIVER, Dec. 2 (AP)—Ferdinand Gagnon, was sentenced to 30 days in the House of Correction today for hanging a dog to a picket fence.

Garnon told police, they said, the dog followed him from a house and that he didn't like the animal. He admitted police asserted, taking a clothesline and hanging the dog a white spitz.

Sheehan Probes $500,000 Revere Auto Theft Ring

Revere "racket busters" under the direction of Captain James T. Sheehan today plunged a widespread drive to clear up the organized thefts of automobiles valued at $500,000 there during the past year, it was learned exclusively by the Boston Evening American.

The campaign has been undertaken to prove the anti-crime forces' final right to drive into matters other than the slaying of Louis Gaeta, Revere gambler, as theretofore sources declared.

Investigators from four major automobile companies have conferred with Captain Sheehan and District Attorney Foley since Governor Hurley ordered the former into Revere last Friday, it was learned.

While these insurance investigators have taken no active part in the investigation, similar to that of several federal agencies, it was learned they are watching the outcome of Captain Sheehan's probe.

'DUMPING GROUNDS'

For years, according to insurance investigators, Revere and Chelsea have been the "dumping grounds" for hundreds of stolen automobiles and the route of payments to thieves, subsequent investigation and office work have cost the insurance companies millions of dollars.

In connection with the automobile theft probe revelation, insurance investigators also pointed out that it was this investigation which resulted in Department of Justice agents entering Revere to track down the theft of cars from other states and driven into Revere, to be remodelled for resale.

Once a stolen car is driven across a state line the so-called Dyer act is violated, constituting a federal offense.

According to an investigator close to the district attorney's office, the process used is this:

REMOVE NUMBERS

The car is stolen outside of Revere and brought into that city, where the serial numbers are removed from the engine and the car is repainted.

Fraudulent dealers' plates are put on the machine, which is driven to an outlying city or town where a "middle man" makes a quick trade with an old machine whose serial number is placed onto the engine of the stolen car, from that point on the car loses its "identity" and the insurance company is theretofore powerless to act.

Over a period of eight years, according to investigators, theft of automobiles has been a lucrative practice for organized gangs.

A $1500 automobile can be sold quickly after "transformation" for $500 at a net cost of less than $100.

In Revere and other nearby cities, the garages which housed these stolen cars have closed while the "heat is on"—similar to the night clubs and horse race and number pool rooms.

Florida Man Gets Extradition Hearing

Asst. Atty.-Gen. James J. Bacigalupo today set December 14 as the date for a hearing in the case of William P. Hally whose extradition as a fugitive from justice is sought by the state of Florida.

Hally, now in custody at Framingham State Police Barracks, is charged by authorities of Dade County, Florida, with malicious injury to a building in Miami by the use of explosives last January 16.

Holdup Sleuthing Ends With Victim in Custody

Now Sergeant Mark Morrison can't be blamed if he looked a little dazed while tip-toeing around police headquarters today like he was expecting some other nutty thing to happen and scramble his detective reasoning.

It all started a few days ago when a lad giving his name as George McCarthy and an address in Billings road, Norfolk Downs, reported that some scamp had spilled him at Tremont and Boylston streets and then had helped him up, with apologies.

Afterward, he said, he found his wallet and $21 were missing.

FINDS A SUSPECT

Well, Sergeant Morrison went after a few lads he knows operate that way and he finally picked up a suspect. Then the detective went to Billings road to find McCarthy for identification purposes.

At the address given, however, no one by the name McCarthy was known. The sergeant was still puzzling over this when who should walk out of the house but the chap who'd given his name as McCarthy.

If Morrison's tone was a bit harsh when he asked the moneylender for an explanation, at least it did some good.

Out of a clear sky, according to Morrison, the lad said he was really Henry M. Collins, 23, of Radman street, Fall River, and that he was a real holdup man, being wanted for a store robbery in Dighton on Thanksgiving Eve.

Still a bit dizzied, Morrison took the youth to headquarters, checked and found that he was wanted. Searching him, police found some papers which made them scratch heads again. On the papers were written expressions like this:

BANDIT SPEECH

"This is a stick-up. Don't act funny. If you make any noise there'll be shooting. Just give me the bills and be quick about it. This gun is loaded."

One of these papers, with a little different handbit speech written on it was signed "A Friend."

"Maybe I'm a nutcake," sighed Morrison as he prepared to turn Collins over to Dighton authorities.

O'Brien, School Heads Called in Revere Probe

Mayor's Fund Action Under Fire; Foley to Hear Councillors

Suffolk County's investigation into Revere took a new turn today when Mayor James M. O'Brien, members of the City Council and school committee of the beach resort city were called to appear before District Attorney William J. Foley.

The conference, it was learned, was instigated by the school committee in a request to the district attorney about a month ago as a result of "failure" of Mayor O'Brien to appropriate funds for salaries, textbooks and supplies as designated in the 1937 school department budget.

Miss Fannie C. Janvrin, chairman of the Revere School Committee, was reluctant to discuss the conference but admitted its purpose was to discuss "several chapters of the law."

From Assistant District Attorney Frederick T. Doyle, in charge of the matter, it was learned that the school committee alleges, in effect, that the mayor did not have the right to slash the school committee budget.

Assistant District Attorney Doyle said the law involved was chapter 71, section 34, of the General Laws, "Supplementary edition, which states 'towns shall raise by taxation money necessary for the support of public schools as required by this chapter (public schools) . . .'"

Doyle said that in a test case it was shown that "cities and towns are used interchangeably."

Others called to attend the conference included City Solicitor J. Wallace Mahoney of Revere, Attorney Herbert Parker, representing the elementary school teachers; Attorney Michael Shaw, representing the high school teachers, and an attorney for the school board.

Threats to Kill Atty. Crooker

C. W. Crooker, prominent Boston attorney, today revealed that a threat had been made upon his life.

Crooker, who represents William H. Gardiner and a group of unorganized taxpayers of Middlesex County in favor of retaining horse and dog racing in Massachusetts, stated the threat came over the telephone.

"Why're going to get you and get you good!" a foreign-sounding voice said, after inquiring if Crooker was the "bird" who was interested in dog and horse racing.

"The call came yesterday afternoon at 2:35," Crooker said.

"I answered because my secretary was out. The voice inquired if I was the 'bird' interested in dog and horse racing."

"I replied I didn't know if I was the 'bird,' but I said I was interested in dog and horse racing.

"The man on the other end of the line started cursing, and calling me very foul names.

"Then he said 'We'll get you and get you good!'

Hope for 2 Airmen After Plane Crash

NORFOLK, Va., Dec. 2 (AP)—Navy airmen, scanning the shore, saw Virginia Beach where a plane carrying two men plunged into the Atlantic last night, reported today they sighted a parachute a mile inland from where the plane fell. Its discovery followed a resident's report that he saw rocket flares near that place just before dawn today. A searching party started to the spot in hope that Aviation Cadet J. J. Hall of Washington, D. C., pilot, and Troy Blanton, of Lafayette, Ala., machinist's mate, may have leaped safely as the plane fell.

Ex-Actress' Divorce Hit By Husband

MRS. H. DOUGLAS WILSON

Wilson, a Former Eli Athlete, Seeks His Child's Custody

RENO, Dec. 2 (AP)—H. Douglas Wilson, New York stock broker, today announced dissatisfaction with the legality of Arkansas divorces granted Mrs. Helen Rork Getty Wilson, former film actress, and said he would seek a Reno divorce and custody of their 10-month-old daughter.

The 32-year-old former Yale athlete said they were married April 7, 1936, shortly after she divorced Jean Paul Getty, wealthy New York and Los Angeles oil man.

"My sole objective is to win custody of my daughter," said Wilson.

He claimed that 10 days after his wife divorced him at Hot Springs, Ark., in June, she returned, and that they secretly married at Madison, Conn., in August. Mrs. Wilson, he said, later left for California.

U. S. Sues to End Wire 'Monopoly'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (INS)—The government today had filed suit in the Federal Court of the Southern district of New York to dissolve certain "monopolistic" contracts the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies assertedly hold with railroads and hotels.

The companies are accused of restraining trade and attempting to monopolize interstate communication in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

The Brighter Side

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International Copyright and all other rights reserved.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 2—You are in Washington, District of Columbia, the capital of the nation, and you see in the middle distance the contour of the building that is called the White House.

You should be reflecting on the historical background and the significance of this building which to our 130,000,000 stands as the symbol of a free government. Instead, you find yourself thinking of it as heartbreak house.

Damon Runyon

You think of it as the place where, at regular intervals, we install one of our well-meaning citizens as the leader of our country, and then proceed to break his heart. You recall the way we go about breaking his heart.

We install him in heartbreak house with military pomp and ceremony, and 'mid great huzzas. Bands play, flags flutter, and crowds mill through the beautiful boulevards of Washington, District of Columbia, at the installation.

Hundreds of newspapermen and women write thousands upon thousands of words about the most trifling details of the ceremony, and the newspapers make great, flaring headlines of the event.

HAPPY FOR A DAY

Our well-meaning citizen that we have selected as the tenant of heartbreak house usually beams upon the multitude that years ehere of welcome at him, unless he is of that "dead pan" type of visage that never for an instant opens the window of a smile to show what is in the soul.

Probably, however, his heart is light within his bosom that one day. He is happy.

He must be happy that one day because he has reached the summit of American ambition, perhaps by a long, tough, devious route. He is the President of the United States of America, chieftain of one of the greatest peoples on the face of the earth.

He should be happy that day. He may never know another happy day after he steps across the threshold of yonder building.

HAUNTED HEADQUARTERS

That day is the day we start in to break the heart of our well-meaning citizen. We are paying him $75,000 per year for the privilege, and giving him yonder building for his headquarters. We are giving him heartbreak house.

It is not our fault that he did not inspect the premises and discover that they are haunted by spooks of disappointment, of ill health and mental and spiritual agonies.

Heartbreak house is a nice looking place. From where you sit, the building looks pleasant, substantial and secure. Yet you are aware that it is not as secure as the humblest cottage in the land, and you wonder vaguely that the supply of well-meaning citizens eager to tenant it never runs out.

Heartbreak house is not as secure as the humblest cottage in the world. It is not secure to privacy, the inalienable right of every American citizen, except the well meaning citizen we install there. It is not secure against the slimy tongue of scandal, against the most sinister whisperings and rumors.

A FLAWLESS SYSTEM

That is part of our system of breaking the heart of the well-meaning tenant of heartbreak house. We misconstrue the best of his intentions. We question his motives. We deride his theories. We impede his actions.

By the very simple expediency of purposely misunderstanding his well meaning, we soon have him thoroughly bewildered, and then he is definitely on his way to a broken heart.

Of all the well meaning citizens with whom we have tenanted the premises down through the years of the republic, only a few had a cardiac fortitude that resisted our efforts to break their hearts. Only a few emerged from heartbreak house still able to smile.

Most of them came out greatly saddened men, their health impaired, and their spirit shattered, and they never fully recovered.

NO CHANCE TO RECOVER

We have craftily fixed an age limit on the tenants of heartbreak house that automatically places them beyond that youthful period of physical and mental resiliency that might enable them to regain, in the course of time, their former selves.

We like to catch them at an age when their well-meaning and their pride and reputation is most highly developed. It is easier to break their hearts then than if they were young. When we break their hearts, we want them to stay broken, and our record to date is high class.

You reflect that it is strange, in view of this record, we still teach every male child born in this great country that he has a chance to one day be a tenant of heartbreak house.

Mrs. Ellen O'Brien Rites Are Planned

Funeral services were being completed today for Mrs. Ellen E. O'Brien, 57, of Beach street, Revere, mother of William L. O'Brien, Jr., cafe patriot of the slain Louis Gaeta of Revere.

Mrs. O'Brien, wife of the president of the Revere Chamber of Commerce, died at her home yesterday following an illness she had suffered for some time.

China Raiders Bomb Jap Ships In Shanghai

Tokyo Officials Claim 13 Planes Are Shot Down in Nanking

SHANGHAI, Dec. 2 (INS)—Warfare returned to Shanghai today as two Chinese bombing planes tried, without success, to sink the Japanese flagship Idzumo at anchor in the Whangpoo river.

The planes also attacked other Japanese warships moored off Woosung.

In retaliation, six Japanese planes raided Nanking, engaging in a spectacular air battle with 30 Soviet-built planes, 13 of which were claimed to have been shot down.

Fierce fighting raged on the western front as Japanese armies met desperate resistance from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's legions, which battled to check the Nipponese advance on Nanking.

At the same time, Japanese commanders prepared to stage a "victory march" of six battalions of their troops through Shanghai's foreign area.

CHINESE IN PANIC

Reports were received here from Nanking that the city, aided by reinforcements from Szechuan Province, claimed to have recaptured Kwangteh during a counter-attack in which they advanced 13 miles. There was no confirmation of this among Japanese authorities.

The conflict also spread far to north and south. Panic gripped the port of Tsingtao, on reports of an impending Japanese attack, while renewed Japanese threats and an air raid against Canton aroused nervousness in Britain's nearby crown colony, Hong Kong.

The "victory parade," scheduled for tomorrow, will wind through the International Settlement, complete with armored cars, tanks, blaring bands and Nipponese banners.

PLAN TO BALK RIOTS

It is scheduled to last two and a half hours. Police authorities in the Settlement are taking utmost precautions to prevent rioting among Chinese spectators.

Foreign authorities tried their utmost to persuade the Japanese to abandon the parade idea. They feared it might lead to street fighting between the marching troops and Chinese.

Fearing the results of the march, the Shanghai municipal council dispatched a written protest to the Japanese, declaring the "victory parade" is "most inadvisable at the present juncture."

British troops manning the western defense sector of the Settlement —the projected point of entry of the Japanese march—removed the barbed wire barricade.

The paraders will not enter the French Concession, since they do not possess the same rights there they have gained in the Settlement.

Victor C. Carr, Goodrich Official, Dies in Sleep

Victor C. Carr, 54, Boston College graduate, son of Edward C. Carr, past exalted ruler of the Boston Lodge of Elks, and brother of Melvin G. Carr of the Boston Daily Record editorial staff, died suddenly early today at Akron, O.

Widely known throughout New England, Mr. Carr was national sales promotion manager for the B. F. Goodrich Tire & Rubber Co. at Akron. He had suffered from heart disease for several years and died in his sleep.

Mr. Carr was born in Boston, Jan. 28, 1883, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Carr of Colby road, Roslindale. His father, a piano dealer for 40 years, headed the Elks in 1916 and was director of public celebrations for Boston in 1934, 1935 and 1936.

Spending his boyhood in Allston, Victor Carr went to Washington Allston grammar school, graduating in 1917. He spent 1917 and 1918 at St. Charles Preparatory College in Baltimore, then entered Boston College high school, where he was graduated in 1921.

He graduated cum laude, at Boston College, being valedictorian of the class of 1925. Just before his graduation, he married Miss Marie G. Whittaker of Roslindale, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Whittaker.

In 1926, he joined the advertising department of the Goodrich Company and rose rapidly.

Besides his widow, parents and brother, Melvin, he is survived by a sister, Mrs. Douglas Stewart of Roslindale, and three children, Jean Marie, 12; Robert, 10, and David, six.

Funeral arrangements are indefinite, but the body will be brought to the home of his brother, Melvin G. Carr, at 4 Glenburnie road, West Roxbury, and services will be at West Roxbury's Holy Name Church.

LEIGH B. LIGGETT

Funeral services for Leigh Bence Liggett, 40, secretary of the United Drug Company, will be held Saturday at his home, 401 Beacon street, Chestnut Hill.

He was the only son of Louis K. Liggett, former Republican National committeeman and president of the United Drug Company.

Liggett was graduated from Harvard in 1918. During the World War, he enrolled in the Naval Reserve and was assigned to the Charlestown Navy Yard. He later was transferred to a submarine chaser and promoted to chief boatswain's mate.

After the war, he entered the employ of his father's company and spent a year in England for the firm. On his return he became secretary, a post he held until his death.

In 1923, he married Marjorie E. Appel, of Brookline, who survives him. He also leaves three children, Marleigh L., Virginia and Louis K. Liggett, 2nd.

ROWLAND RICKWOOD

Funeral services for Rowland L. Rickwood, 86, will be held tomorrow afternoon at his home, 31 Norfolk road, Arlington.

He was a mechanical engineer with the Blanchard Machine Company of Cambridge. He died of a heart attack at his home.

C. D. MONTGOMERY

NEWBURYPORT, Dec. 2—The funeral of Charles D. Montgomery, 61, substitute coach of Newburyport High School and former track coach, will be held Saturday from St. Paul's Episcopal Church, with burial in the family lot at Winthrop.

Montgomery was born in Maine and was graduated from Dartmouth College. He began teaching school in Ashland in 1904 and had served in a number of cities and towns before coming here.

MRS. J. F. CONCANNON

Funeral services for Mrs. Julia Concannon, wife of Inspector James F. Concannon of police headquarters, will be held tomorrow morning with a solemn high mass of requiem in St. Gregory's Church, Dorchester Lower Mills.

She died following an illness of two weeks at the home, 258 Gallivan boulevard, Dorchester, Sunday.

Mrs. Concannon was born in South Boston and for many years was active in the affairs of St. Peter and Paul's Church, at one time the leader of the Women's Sodality.

Woman Is Badly Hurt in Crash

Thrown through the windshield when the car in which she was riding was in collision with a truck in Cambridge at noon today, Mrs. Julia Bragdon, 57, of Prescott street, Cambridge, was near death at Cambridge Relief Hospital.

Doctors said she suffered a possible fracture of the skull, probable internal injuries, concussion and injury of the right leg. Her name was on the danger list.

Her son, Fred, the driver, was treated at the hospital for cuts and bruises of the hands and face.

According to police, the car was in collision with a ten-ton refrigeration truck at Sixth street and Broadway, East Cambridge. Francis F. Draper of Fifth street, East Cambridge, operator of the truck, was not injured.

Mrs. Bragdon was rushed to the hospital by two passing motorists, John H. Murphy and Walter Probert, employed in the State Department of Correction.

Soviets Execute 7 in Poison Plot

WARSAW, Dec. 2 (INS)—Two engine drivers, a cook, a cook's assistant and three waiters of a Soviet Trans-Siberian express train were executed for an attempt to assassinate Marshal Vasily Blucher by poisoning him, the newspaper Express Poranny reported today.

The paper said the attempt was made while the Russian Far Eastern military commander was en route from Moscow to Vladivostok, according to Moscow reports.

It added that the poison was placed in food served at a luncheon aboard the train. Four staff officers were reported to have died from the poison, two others were stricken critically ill and 14 more were sick.

Blucher, said the Express Poranny, escaped by not attending the luncheon.

Iron Worker Halts Duke of Kent Smoke

NEWBATTLE ABBEY, Scotland, Dec. 2 (AP)—A Scottish iron worker interrupted the Duke of Kent's after-luncheon smoke here today. The duke and several members of his party started puffing cigarettes when Edmund Hughes, chairman, an iron foundry employe reminded all present that "no smoking is allowed in the dining hall." The duke smiled and finished his smoke in the lounge.

Virginia's Next Governor Guest In Boston

Price to Install His Friend Rosen as Masonic Master

James H. Price, the smiling, white-haired, gum-chewing, soft-spoken lieutenant governor and governor-elect of the state of Virginia, came to Boston today and remained genially non-committal about politics and the New Deal.

"I'm going to steer clear of all controversy," he said, "I'm just here on a friendly little visit to install my friend, Joseph R. Rosen, as master of Moses Michael Hays lodge of Masons tonight at the temple in Boylston street."

AIDE EX-BOSTONIAN

Foremost in his mind was his recollection of his trip to Hollywood last week, where he met Bette Davis.

"She's a grand girl," he said softly. "She had on a perfect Southern accent."

At the Ritz Carlton he was met by Felix Vorenberg, head of Gilchrist's; Meyer Mosrow, president of the Back Bay Improvement Association; John O'Hare, Dr. Hyman Schwartz, Edward J. Fallon and Julian J. Burnes.

He sketched a program that included a visit to Harvard and meetings with Mayor Mansfield and Governor Hurley. He spoke briefly of his own state.

"Virginia is 70 per cent rural," he pointed out, "and so is affected by the Federal farm act. We have a similar piece of legislation of our own. But we have no old age assistance—the only state in the union without such law.

TOO MANY IN JAIL

"Our problems are modest. The budget is balanced, but we must come to grips with our education problem that is complicated by the illiteracy of colored and mountain people.

"We have comparatively little industry, so we have few labor problems. We would be hit if the federal government discontinues its work program. And we must also solve our penal problem. Down in Virginia, we have too many people in jail."

The governor, a graduate of Washington and Lee, was a member of the assembly in Virginia for 14 years and lieutenant governor for eight years. In his native drawl he spoken of as presidential timber.

"I know that Virginia and Massachusetts will continue to get along well," he declared.

Then he could not resist boasting a little. "Massachusetts was once part of Virginia, you know," he said, and he was right.

Harvard Aides Handle Demands of Workers

Harvard University's corporation will "brush aside" the labor situation there as "relatively unimportant," and will "definitely not consider workers' demands" at the corporate meeting Monday, it was reliably reported today.

Union demands for a closed shop and exclusive bargaining power will be referred to Aldrich Durant, the university's business manager, and John Lowes, financial vice president, it was stated.

AFL-organized kitchen and dining hall employes who won pay increases and free laundering last week have voted to press for a closed shop and not to accept the wage raises as final.

Business Manager Durant and Joseph Stefani, union representative, have been in conference on pay demands and demands with reference to working conditions. Probability is, it was said today, an agreement satisfactory to both sides will be worked out.

The university is required by law to recognize the bargaining power of any labor organization and to give priority to that organization which has a majority of employes among its members. The university, however, it was indicated, will take the position it is not compelled by law to sign any contract.

Divorce for Film Star Mary Rudd

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 2 (INS)—Until March of this year, Mary Evelyn Rudd film actress, believed she was legally wed to Michael Rudd, glass company executive, to whom she was married on August 3, 1935.

She told the court today that after they were united in Mexico she learned that an interlocutory decree of divorce granted her husband had not yet become final. So she was awarded a divorce.

Balks Dictator Move

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 2 (INS)—President Lazaro Cardenas' official foot was down on the movement to establish a one-man dictatorship. He rebuked the congressional bloc which is seeking to legislate a corporate state into being.

Police Find Clue In Arena Death

Police have information that about three weeks before the mystery poison-death of Joseph Arena, 27, in his home on Longmeadow street, Roxbury, last Saturday, "a man" attempted unsuccessfully to purchase in a South End drug store the same sort of poison that killed Arena.

This was revealed by Captain John F. McCarthy, commanding the homicide squad, today. Captain McCarthy further stated he planned to talk with Mrs. Arena sometime after Arena's funeral this forenoon.

Arena's funeral was held in St. Paul's Church, Roxbury, the Rev Patrick J. Quinn officiating. Burial was in Forest Hills Cemetery. Arena is survived by his widow and two small children.

Milk Crisis Balked

BUFFALO, N. Y., Dec. 2—Word from a group of 700 producers that they would not join a Western New York strike on Friday removed the threat of a possible milk shortage today.

Fred Bartholomew Now Police Captain

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those stabbing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

New Court Fight Over Edgerton

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (INS)—Revival of the supreme Court issue which ripped the Senate wide open last session was threatened today when senators questioned President Roosevelt's appointment of Henry W. Edgerton to the U. S. court of appeals here.

Senator Burke (D.) of Nebraska said he will seek to have Edgerton explain his views on the practice of courts holding acts of Congress invalid—the power of judicial review.

Burke is chairman of the subcommittee considering Edgerton's nomination. Senator Borah (R.) Idaho, and Van Nuys (D.) of Indiana, are the other members. All vigorously opposed the President's original plan to enlarge the Supreme Court.

Edgerton served as professor of law at Cornell University and at George Washington University.

Black Gets Listing In Social Register

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (AP)—The capital's 1938 Social Register notes the elevation of former Senator Hugo L. Black to the Supreme Court bench. It also recognizes the marriage last June of Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. to Ethel du Pont of Wilmington, Del., and the transfer to Washington from New York of the President's eldest son, James, Jr., and his wife, the former Betsy Cushing of Boston.

5 Strong Cops Lift Fat Lady Into Bed

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (INS)—Mrs. Amanda Siebert, former side show headliner weighing 650 pounds, fell out of bed last night in Brooklyn—and the crash was so reverberating a neighbor called a cop. The officer called another bluecoat, who in turn called three more—and it took all five to hoist Mrs. Siebert back into bed.

By BETTY ALDEN

Shopping Tours Follows Musicale

AFTER TEN YEARS of concerts by the world's greatest musical artists, the Morning Musicales now occupy an enviable place in the cultural life of Boston . . . and at this time of year they have a second, less cultural and quite practical value . . .

When the "do your Christmas shopping early" signs are first posted around the stores, practically everyone makes a secret vow to herself to actually get the Christmas gift purchasing over early this year . . . but it is not as easy as it seems . . .

All sorts of things come up to delay matters and each day milady promises herself that she will get started tomorrow . . . and that's where the December 1 Musicale came in . . . After hearing Yehudi Menuhin's concert yesterday at the Statler Hotel, many musicale subscribers had a quick luncheon and took advantage of the fact that they were already down town and devoted the rest of the day to shopping . . .

Incidentally some friend of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Warren Walker, Jr., is going to receive some gay hand painted pottery which we saw Mrs. Walker looking at in a Boylston street shop yesterday afternoon . . . Betsy Shrigley Wheeler spent some time selecting Christmas cards in the same shop . . . and was very appropriately dressed for the season in a burgundy red suit trimmed with bands of gray Persian lamb to match her fur hat . . . Sue Storey, who is going to make her debut at a dance given by Mrs. James J. Storrow next Wednesday evening, looked as though she were more intent on putting the finishing touches on her presentation outfit rather than cross off the "musts" on her Christmas list . . .

Mrs. Frank Cheever Nichols is leaving some of her holiday shopping to other members of her family . . . for, even though she had charge of one of the doors at concert, she kept one eye on the clock so she would be sure to make the 1 o'clock train to New York . . . She has gone over for ten days of gadding about with some friends she met on a round-the-world cruise last year . . . she looked pretty snappy in her travelling costume which consisted of a beautiful dark green suit with a tuxedo collar of silky lynx, a tiny green hat and a becoming turquoise blouse . . . Mrs. Robert C. Terry, in a soft shade of red velveteen, with black accessories and a red tipped white orchid on one shoulder, had charge of another door . . . This duty is one which requires plenty of firmness at times . . . for, in spite of hard and fast rules laid down by the committee to insure the maximum of silence, some subscribers (unless dealt with firmly) insist on opening and shutting the doors during the time the artist is playing . . .

Mrs. Adolf Leeds in Black Outfit

MRS. PAUL CLARK was another music lover with one eye on the clock . . . for her daughter Jean was to make her debut at The Country Club last evening and Mrs. Clark had to hustle home to put her approval on the last minute arrangements . . . Her gown of brown lace threaded with gold was already to step into and Jean's eggshell taffeta trimmed with kolinsky, needed only the addition of her brown and green orchids to complete her presentation outfit . . .

Mrs. A. Barr Comstock, chairman of the advertising committee, joined friends for luncheon in the Statler dining room after the concert . . . Mrs. Adolph Leeds, in a smart black outfit brightened by an emerald color ascot, also lunched at the hotel with friends, following the concert . . . One of the best costumes of the morning was worn by Mrs. Frederick L. Richardson, whose soft red wool suit had a short jacket buttoned up to her chin, a small round collar of mink and mink tails on her close fitting red turban . . . She topped her suit with a mink coat . . . Mrs. C. Stewart Sanders was another ardent music lover present as were Mrs. William T. Gardiner in a becoming plum colored silk dress and matching fez, Mrs. Clement S. Houghton with her guest, Mrs. William Ellery, who is a violinist in her own name, Mrs. J. Willard Hayden, Mrs. William Davis Taylor in a very feminine looking outfit of pale gray with a short gray Persian lamb jacket, Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Jr., wrapped in mink, Mrs. Edwin S. Webster, Mrs. Charles Hovey, Mrs. Royden Loring, Mrs. Ariel B. Edwards and Polly Cotter . . .

Skiers Attend Carnival

LAST EVENING many socialites who have their skiis and skates all waxed and sharpened, awaiting King Winter's dinner gong, appeased the pangs of waiting by attending the Winter Sports Carnival at Boston Garden . . . watching European experts perform on ice and ski slide . . . Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Heard, who climb aboard nearly every train headed for the snowy hills of New Hampshire over winter week-ends, were among the first to arrive at the Garden . . . following closely by Elizabeth "Sis" Hovey with several members of her family and Mrs. John Gardner Flint . . . Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Means with Anne and Robert L. attended in a family group, and Mrs. D. Codman Blodget chaperoned her daughter, Polly, a well known figure skater in amateur circles . . .

Country Club Dance Marks Her Debut

Bellarmine Lecture on Spain

Prominent members of Ballarmine Academy were abroad at an early hour yesterday trekking to Commonwealth Country Club for Father Joseph O'Callaghan's lecture on the Spanish strife.

Mrs. John G. Downing presided in her customary role of president, her royal blue frock and matching hat most attractive. Her sister and sister-in-law, Mrs. M. L. Ryan and Mrs. Joseph O'Connell, provided the lecturer with two of his most intent listeners. Mrs. Ryan twined sable about the neckline of her black tailleur. Mrs. O'Connell's gold colored velour was a colorful touch with her black and silver fox ensemble.

The task of delivering a pep talk on the Father Ahern seismograph fellowship benefit was detailed to Mrs. Joseph H. Shortell, who accomplished the duty with her customary finesse.

Secretaries of the group, Mrs. John A. Walsh, Jr., and Alice Barry, busied themselves checking attendance. Mrs. Thomas Kelly entertained Ruth Bulger as her lecture guest while Mrs. William Barry engaged in some animated conversation with Mrs. John Morrison at the conclusion of the lecture.

Carol Smith Weds Soon

Everyone will be wearing Christmas presents and storing the choicer pieces of holiday wrapping paper away for another year before Carol Smith and August Zinser, Jr., receive the last of their gifts.

Miss Smith has chosen Monday, December 27, two days after Christmas as the date of her wedding, so Santa Claus and Dan Cupid will undoubtedly join forces in lavishing gifts upon the happy couple.

The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Norman Nash of the Harvard Theological School, in the Ash street home of Mrs. Martin Mower, a friend and near neighbor of the bride's family. There will be no bridal attendants. A small reception will be held at Mrs. Mower's.

'Envoy Extraordinary'

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

CHAPTER NINE

"I should be miserable if I were anything else," he assured her.

"You are not an easy person to understand," she said.

"You are silent because there is a great deal at the back of your mind that you could share with no one, but I should like you to have just enough feeling for me—enough faith, shall I say?—to remain oblivious to anything which troubles you?

He looked down the avenue for a moment without speech to the meadow at the opening of the woods and the gamekeeper's lodge beyond, on the lawn of which the beaters were busy laying out the game.

In the background, the Great House dominated the landscape, somewhat grim in the clear winter light with its lordly towers and long rows of mullioned windows, an incongruous and yet in a way a harmonious structure.

"Well, I'll try," he promised. "I am not really so suspicious as I seem but I have not quite forgotten, you know, that chance meeting. You were with your uncle—you remember it—in North Africa."

"Yes, I remember it," she answered unwillingly.

"Cannot you see how difficult that makes it for me to look upon you as an ordinary member of my household?" he asked.

She was silent for a moment. Her left hand suddenly rested upon his shoulder. It stayed there scarcely a second but he seemed to feel the thrill of its caress through the leather patch on his shooting jacket.

"We should never be enemies," she told him softly.

"We have both of us too much the spirit for right living. All that I ask of you just now is that you remain a little tolerant. Do not think of me as even a possible enemy. That could never be.

"Talk with me sometimes. Please try to know me a little better. I have no evil thoughts in anything I do but the greatest passion in my life is my love of my country.

"If something should occur which made it possible for me to help her, I should do it, but I would do nothing to harm anyone like yourself under whose roof I am living."

Her last words, although in a sense consolatory, left him with a faint sense of uneasiness which lingered with him more or less throughout the day. Nevertheless, he performed flawlessly his duty as host to a very distinguished gathering of sportsmen.

Later, in the library of his suite, Matresser found waiting for him the man whom he had often declared to various places to be the only person he had ever known in any walk of life who had never made a mistake.

This paragon of secretaries, the invaluable Henry Yates, was manipulating a noiseless typewriter with incredible speed, using the fingers of one hand only, when his employer entered.

Yates rose to his feet at once. He was a small man—frail, with short brown beard streaked with gray, and wore thick spectacles.

A "FOREIGN TRICK"

"Good evening, Henry," Matresser greeted him as he took up a position on the hearthrug with his back to the log fire. "Heaps of news for you. Anything happened here?"

"A note from the gentleman who arrived in the harbor during the storm of last night," Henry Yates reported. "You would like, perhaps, to glance at it yourself."

Matresser drew a blue sheet of note paper from the square envelope which Yates handed to him and read the few lines.

"Yacht DAPHNE.

"My Lord:

'A stranger driven into your harbor by distress of weather would esteem the honor of paying his respects to you at any suitable hour.

'Faithfully yours,

'JAN VAN WESTRHEENE.'

"Foreign trick, that, isn't it?" Matresser remarked, tapping a cigarette against his case.

"I suppose it is a foreign habit, sir, to call first upon any person of distinction. In any case, I thought you might like to see him. I ventured to tell him 6 o'clock."

"Excellent."

"Furthermore," Yates continued, "I noticed through my glasses at luncheon time that the yacht is flying the ensign, which apparently is out of order as van Westrheene is not a member of the Squadron or the Royal Thames Yacht Club."

"He must be a bit of a seaman all the same," Matresser observed. "All the more so if the yacht is a chartered one. I saw him being her in himself last night. That reminds me, Yates. You will have to look out for ourself. Seems to me we are drifting back into prehistoric times."

"You heard part of my conversation with Sir Francis Tring last night. Someone had a whack at that poor chap who is lying at the doctor's with concussion.

"Someone near here, too. He was carrying a letter to me which is missing."

"I understood, of course, that something of the sort had happened," Yates acknowledged, "but I was hoping that the letter itself would turn up. Have you any idea of the nature of its contents, sir?"

A CHARMING SPY?

"Not exactly," Matresser admitted. "I fancy that Tring is coming down. The most disquieting thing is that it should have happened at all. Who can there be in this neighborhood who is spying on us?"

"Has your lordship inquired into the credentials of Mademoiselle Stanier?" Yates ventured. Matresser nodded frowning.

"I am in rather an awkward position about that young lady," he admitted.

"Apparently she is here as a sort of companion to my sister, her credentials are official and beyond dispute. She may be working for France, as I daresay she is and I will admit that we are not quite ready to take France into our whole confidence in certain matters, but that will all be explained so soon that I do not want any trouble. You know how anxious I am that not a soul in our household—"

"Will you pardon my interrupting," Yates begged, "but the situation is perfectly clear to me. I think it would be unwise to interfere with the young lady in any way. She will be continually under our observation and I do not look upon her as a possible source of danger."

"You mean," Matresser remarked, "that she may be more useful than dangerous to us now that she is under surveillance. Besides, in the present instance it is quite impossible that she could have committed a personal assault upon the messenger."

There was a knock at the door. A footman appeared ushering in a visitor.

"Mr. van Westrheene to see your lordship," he announced.

Furs With Luxurious Flair

By ANNICE BRINK

IT'S A FAR cry from the day when a whole seasonful of furs paraded out triumphantly with the same Johnny collars cut with the same jib on mink and muskrat.

If it's luxury you want and individuality as well—just name your favorite details and you can find them!

Collars are tiny and unapologetic, or so big that they're half-capes. Only the height of chic is reached by the completely collarless coat.

• • •

Waists may be defined as though they were laced into a peasant bodice. Or a straight line is hung from the shoulder to the hem with nary a break to indicate whether you have a waistline or not.

Borders are making a large come-back. For the tall, lithe whip of a gal there's nothing quite so prancing and smart as a flared skirt edge with a fur band.

• • •

BRILLIANT red fox in cuff and hem swirls plays up the soft, black sheen of Hudson seal in this dramatic fur coat. There's striking contrast also in the tiny self-collar and the muff-size cuffs.

ONE OF the nicer versions of the trotteur that's brisk and snappy, yet long enough for comfort, is this grey Persian, below. Interesting also because its curls are so softly becoming, and the shading ranges from snow-flake white to deep, shadow greys.

FOR SHOPPING information on these fur fashion finds, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Liberty 4000, week-days until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Brilliant Fake---Card

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

"Sometimes it doesn't pay to be a good player," said South, mournfully, after he had played the hand below.

"If I didn't pay attention to spot-cards I would have made my slam." South was correct.

A poor player would have made the slam. Credit must be given to East for sizing up South's ability and for brilliantly seizing his opportunity.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	1◇	Pass
2♠	Pass	4♠	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5♣	Pass
6♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened a low heart and declarer let it ride around to his ten-ace. A brief survey of the combined hands revealed the fact that there was no way of avoiding the loss of the Ace of diamonds. South merely had to take care to lose no trump tricks.

In accordance with the best technique, he laid down the Ace of spades at trick two. East dropped the nine-spot, and South indulged in a little thought. South had intended to win the second trump trick with dummy's Queen.

If both players followed, it would be a simple matter to draw a third round of trumps. If West showed out, a finesse would be established against East. He recognized from the lead of four trumps to the Jack-9 in West's hand would defeat him.

When East's nine dropped on the first trump trick, however, it seemed to South that he had been presented with an opportunity to pick up four trumps to the Jack in West's hand, as apparently East had started with the doubleton Jack-9, or the singleton nine of trumps.

In the former case there would be no difficulty in playing the trump suit. In the latter case it was vital for South to take the second trump trick in his own hand and then finesse dummy's eight of spades.

At trick three, therefore, South laid down the King of spades, and discovered that East's brilliant false-card had assured a trump trick to the defenders.

Rouge Chills Love Of Dorchester Man

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A TRAGIC problem comes to my desk today. It concerns a Dorchester woman who uses so much rouge that the love of her fiance is seriously menaced.

Hers, of course, is a not uncommon fault. Too many of us, as we grow older, make the grave mistake of using too much makeup.

As everybody knows, women past the 30 mark do not have cheeks as red as apples—not naturally. Consequently those of mature years whose complexions resemble ripe tomatoes are fooling nobody save themselves.

But, before I express more of my opinion, I shall give you the letter that actually describes a woman who "paints" more liberally than wisely. Here it is:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

At 29 years of age, I'm desperately in love with a widow in the same office where I'm employed, who is a year or so older than I am.

Since we've become engaged, she has started to put on about twice as much rouge as she used to do. It makes her look much older and gives her a hard expression.

I'm afraid this will make me love her less as time goes on.

How can I ask her in a kind way not to use so much? I'm afraid to criticize her.

JACK.

DEAR JACK:

You might very tactfully quote to your fiancee that old proverb "beauty unadorned adorned the most."

And then tell her that you love her just as she is, and that her complexion needs no such embellishing.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ASHAMED OF GLASSES

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am 17 years old, and am much in need of advice. I weigh about 120 pounds, wear spectacles, and have been told I am attractive looking.

I try to keep myself neat in dress, and always wear up-to-the-minute clothes.

Here is my problem—when I go to dances, it seems that the boys don't ask me for dances. I have learned all the latest steps, so I don't think it's my dancing.

I always smile and am pleasant to everyone, so they can't think I'm stuck up. It must be the fact that I wear "glasses."

I keep up with the news, and have plenty of pep and not afraid to talk. I can talk on intellectual subjects, also, but who cares for that?

I've about decided not to go to any more dances, as I know in advance that I'll just be a wallflower.

VIRGINIA.

DEAR VIRGINIA:

Do you happen to wear those queer shaped "glasses," which so many wear these days?

If so, it explains much of the wallflower business. They always seem freakish and exaggerated to me.

Select another style, perhaps a rimless pince-nez, if they're becoming to your personality.

Take some friend with you, or your mother, in whose judgment you have confidence, and get their opinion on the looks of the kind you choose.

Treatment of Mastoiditis

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

THIS time of the year marks an unusual prevalence of infections involving the upper parts of the breathing apparatus. Such troubles are promoted by sudden and unexpected changes in the weather.

Whenever there is an increase in the number of colds, sore throats, tonsilitis, influenza, grippe and other infections, there is a corresponding increase in the number of cases of mastoiditis.

Mastoiditis used to be a greatly feared trouble. Because of the great strides in the surgery of this disease, as well as in its early recognition, it is no longer so dreaded.

In spite of the improved prospect, it must be borne in mind that neglect of mastoiditis is serious. In fact, the disease is only dangerous when it is overlooked, neglected or carelessly treated.

HAS AIR SPACES

As its name indicates, it is an infection or inflammation within the mastoid bone. This is the bone located behind the ear. It is that hard bony prominence or bump which you may feel with your fingers.

The mastoid differs from other bones in that it is honeycombed with numerous air spaces called "mastoid cells." These cells are so arranged that they communicate with one another and ultimately connect with the inner ear.

Since the inner ear connects with the nose and throat, it will be seen how readily infections can travel to the mastoid. For this reason mastoiditis is an occasional complication of colds and other infections of the upper passages.

Once the germs reach the mastoid cells, there they rapidly multiply and form a lot of pus. Imprisoned within the cells of the hard bone, with little chance for the pus to escape, it does damage. As it accumulates the pressure gives rise to certain symptoms.

SIGNS OF MASTOIDITIS

The most characteristic sign of mastoiditis is discomfort first and then severe pain behind the ear. Sometimes the pain is not so great and is disregarded. In the beginning it may be mistaken for an ordinary earache. Soon there is swelling, with tenderness back of the ear.

It is frequently observed in adults, but is more common in young children. Anyone susceptible to common colds, tonsilitis, earache or other infections of the head is in danger of the infection spreading to the mastoid. This possibility is particularly the case among under-nourished and anemic children and adults.

Good Manners

THE WEDDING VEIL

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Recently I attended a variety shower given for a friend and there was a very large crowd—more than two hundred guests. The bride, who had been married two or three weeks, appeared wearing her bridal outfit, even the wedding veil . . . and this was a shower.

Some seemed to think it was a beautiful and clever idea, but I actually felt embarrassed, and thought it very poor taste. I always believed that the veil should be worn for the ceremony only. Was I correct in thinking so?

JUST WONDERING.

Yes, your point of view about this unusual happening is most certainly correct. Instead of being a "clever" idea, it was, to put it mildly, a bizarre idea. And it showed that your taste was in the right pathway, when you were embarrassed.

I should have been embarrassed, too. There are certain occasions when it is, of course, charming for a bride to wear her wedding dress (wedding dresses are often, in these practical days, designed with this idea in mind).

But the wedding veil is for the ceremony and reception only . . . that is the very idea of the wedding veil.

Also, I imagine that the shower was, as showers are, informal, with the guests dressed informally. And the formality of a wedding dress would be most inappropriate to this informal occasion.

Beauty Hints

EVENING coiffures are picking up, so much so that it isn't a bad idea to buy some demountable curls and rolls. They fill in the odd spots and look dressy.

A small braid is a convenience. If the finger wave has gone limp, ringlets look wilted, do the hair smoothly and add your braid.

There are all sorts of arrangements. You can halo it around your head, pinning the home-grown ends underneath.

You can place it on one side, have artificial flowers on the other. Or bee, hair ornaments are very popular.

A Desk For Your Home

DO YOU have a desk where you can write letters? Go over the monthly bills?

Or where Jane can answer her invitations? A desk will add real comfort and there will be a pleasant spot for writing as well as a place for papers and bills. So why not get a desk for your home, suggests Good Housekeeping Studio? You will find desks to fit different types of room.

For instance, for an early American room select a maple drop-lid desk. Be sure to choose one with a lid that drops down to a good writing level and has several small drawers to take care of paper, stamps and other incidentals.

For a living room in contemporary period, choose a knee-hole mahogany desk of the Georgian type that will fit in and balance with the rest of the furniture.

If you have a tiny room, you might make it over into a small study by building bookshelves at one end of the room and placing an early American tavern table against the wall, using this as a desk. Over the table, attach a wall rack to hold books and such.

In arranging a desk in the room, be sure to put it near a window where the light is good. Get a good lamp, an inkwell, a portfolio and an ash tray as accessories.

Game of "Shadow Buff" for Approaching Holidays

This game is a good one for grown-ups as well as children. It is especially suitable for a large party. To prepare for the, stretch a sheet across the room and place a lighted lamp on a table behind it.

There should be no other light in the room. The player who is "it" sits facing the sheet with the lamp several feet behind him. The remaining players pass in back of him and before the lamp disguising themselves in every way they can think of—rumpling their hair, wearing wigs and false noses, and distorting their gait and posture. Of course, the one who is "it" must try to guess whose shadow is passing before him, and as the grotesque shadows are quite different from the originals when last seen, that is not easy.

Married Comrades

By Adele Garrison

MADGE ARRIVES AT BANK

CHAPTER 480

FOR a long second after Mrs. Cosgrove's solemn and confident corroboration of my feeling that her dead brother, Robert Savarin, had desired me to lend part of his legacy to Samuel Brixton, I sat motionless in silent, happy reaction to this final confirming approval of the course which had caused me such uneasiness of conscience.

Mrs. Cosgrove's impassioned declaration that she would go even further than I had planned, to insure Ronald Brixton's future, because of Marion's possible sharing of that future, had heartened me immeasurably. But this final assurance removed my last doubt.

I knew that I should have gone through with my plan even if I had seen that she silently disapproved—she never would have made any oral objection. But the unqualified approbation she had given was like a gift of conquering wings.

"I wonder if you can guess what this means to me," I said huskily.

"Of course I can," she replied promptly. "You needed bolstering and I am so thankful I was able to do it. But, don't you think—"

RESUME JOURNEY

"Indeed, I do," I said promptly, smiling, and turned my ignition key. "We must be leaving here at once. Let us take a last look at this beautiful thing, and then we'll be on our way."

The purr of the motor was lost in the roar of the water, and I gave the leaping columns of snowy spray a last admiring glance and a regretful sigh as I turned the car away from the famous spectacle.

"Goodby!" Mrs. Cosgrove said softly, and I silently echoed her farewell as the car bore us up the winding road from the little park to the state highway.

She turned in her seat and sent a searching glance along the road behind us when we were well upon the level again.

"I can't see any sign of the men," she said, "and I'm sure they didn't pass along here while we were in the park below. I know Edward. He always comes this way and stops for a minute or two no matter what his hurry. And I'm positive no car stopped while we were down there. We were facing this way, and I had a corner of one eye peeled for them even while I was looking at the fountain."

"I'm sure they didn't pass," I agreed. I'm sure of another thing. Dicky never would have gone past here without stopping for a few minutes."

"That means we won't have to worry about keeping them waiting," she said comfortably. "They were to start a half hour after us and they'll spend some time here so we'll be well ahead of them when we get to Kingston."

She proved a true prophet. When we finally reached Kingston, and under Mrs. Cosgrove's direction, I edged the car into a parking place near the bank, there was no sign of the other car anywhere. With a sigh of relief for Dicky's reluctance to keep my husband waiting, born of many more or less heedless experiences, I ran up the windows, locked the car and followed Mrs. Cosgrove into the bank.

"Winslowe's still here," she said, "and it isn't twelve o'clock yet. We're in luck."

She walked with me to the railed-in desk where Mr. Winslow sat. I remembered that I had seen him and had been impressed by his air of capability and dependability upon the day when I had gone to the bank to take possession of the property Robert Savarin had deeded to me.

He rose and extended his hand with grave courtesy to Mrs. Cosgrove as we came up to the desk. Then, as her introduction, he shook hands with me.

"This is an event," he said, smiling. "I do not think you have favored us with a visit since that first one."

"No, I never have been here since," I said.

"And how can we serve you today?"

I drew a deep breath.

"I want to draw out twenty-five thousand dollars today. Will it be possible to get it right away? And may I have it in cash?"

His facial expression did not change, but his eyes were suddenly wary.

"You may have it any way you wish," he said, "but don't you think it is unwise to carry so large a sum with you?"

Half-Hour Applications Restore Unmarred Youth Freshness

By ARLINE GOULD

IF YOU REFUSE to do your bedtime chiffons, satins or wisps-and-marabou a rank injustice by presenting above them a face smeared up like a channel swimmer's, then you should possess a small pink jar of a miraculous line-erasing gland cream that does an all-night job in something like an hour!

It will revivify your complexion, build up tissues and erase wrinkles even in half-hour applications if you haven't let it lapse much from a youthful porcelain-smooth stage.

So penetrative and rich is this gland-extract cream that its chief work is accomplished for the already-marked, middle-aged skin, and that in a space of time from two to three hours long—just before retiring, or during the first part of a good night's rest.

We've never found anything before that did its wrinkle-erasing job in the busy daytime hours but this is just what the gland cream accomplishes. An occasional half-hour during the day will do marvels.

It's called "the joy of life," and is among a famous woman's most important preparations in which a few privileged women.

Among all her preparations it is unsurpassed for erasing telltale lines around the eyes and mouth and for restoring softness and smoothness to a throat showing signs of age. Cruelly-revealing lines are hastened to their doom with the first application.

It is so potent that its use is advised every other night, in conjunction with a milder nourishing cream—which might well be the favorite you're using right now. And its use may be amazingly stirring, considering the yeoman service it gives.

An exciting season is winding up to let go at its right away . . . all the hilarity and madness of Christmas and New Year's . . . and if you don't believe it all is going to show up on your face as definitely as footprints on the sands of time . . . go just one more month without thinking about youth that's slipped by. Use this cream and you'll have stolen years of time in that same month!

For all further information on the "joy of life" gland cream which accomplishes age-dispelling miracles in treatments as short as a half-hour, phone Arline Gould Liberty 4000, week-days until 5, or write her at the Boston Evening American, including a stamped self addressed envelope.

Beauty Answers

QUESTION I work all day in an office and, from using carbon paper, my hands have become very discolored. I tried using pumice stone to remove the grime, and now find that my hands are all chapped. Can you give me a recipe for making a hand lotion that will keep my hands smooth and white? I thank you.

M. H., Dorchester.

DEAR M. H.—People are wailing and crying out loud to us their difficulty of keeping their hands smooth. It seems worse than usual this year, perhaps because everyone is planning to take to the great outdoors more ardently than ever before. At any rate our current suggestion is for you to write in for an all-purpose lotion, which has been given to us by a well-known Boston chemist. If you write in, enclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope, I will gladly mail this formula to you.

Your Figure, Madame!

TURN EXERCISE INTO PLAY

By IDA JEAN KAIN

SO MUCH mystery is thrown around the screen and stage stars that we always wonder what they are like off screen and back stage. Sylvia Sidney is a nice girl . . . you would like her.

This young tragedienne, who weeps such big tears in the movies, is not at all like that, really. She is unaffectedly gay and surprisingly frank. I got a jolt when I asked what exercises she does to keep her lovely figure.

"Oh, I hate exercise," she said quickly. "I just couldn't do those awful ups and downs!"

"Do you ride a bicycle?" I asked hopefully.

"Not if I can help it," was the prompt reply. "I tried once, but I fell off into a cactus plant." I could see her point but we were getting nowhere and it was almost curtain time for "To Quito and Back," her Broadway play.

• • •

"Well, what DO you do when you are not acting?" I asked in desperation.

"Why, I ride horseback and swim, and I love to walk. I can walk a mile in twelve minutes. But I don't take any exercise."

I recommend Miss Sidney's anti exercise program to you. She weighs 112 pounds and is a streamlined size 12, height five feet two and one-half inches.

Whenever anyone says she takes no exercise, all you have to do is look at her figure to tell whether her favorite recreation is bridge or sports.

One does not have a good figure by accident. When sports provide the only exercise a person takes you may be fairly certain that she plays regularly and with zest.

• • •

It did not occur to Miss Sidney that swimming, riding and walking are exercise, because she gets fun out of doing them. "If I could start over again I would play every game there is, and that is the exercise program I would recommend to every girl," she declared.

The average woman, however, is not a sports enthusiast. She can not keep her measurements stream lined without specific exercise, and frankly, I think you can get fun out of a calisthenic.

You can turn on the radio and frolic through knee twists, bends and stretches that perk up your spirits and circulation. If you can't see any fun in exercise, it is because you have the wrong slant on it. (Pardon me, Miss Sidney!)

Send for the "Business Girl's Daily Half Dozen" which is quite all right for the professional girl, too. These exercises will help you to keep supple and streamlined. Write to Ida Jean Kain for the leaflet, and enclose a stamped return envelope.

Renaming of Frances Grant Will Win You a $25 Prize

Somerville Dancer Seeks New Identity For Comeback

A glamorous new name and a new career is the goal of Frances Grant, and YOU have a chance to play a part in her new bid for stage and screen stardom.

The darkly-beautiful Somerville girl wants to change her name, and if it is your choice that is selected you will win $25.

Stella Totophane Fortier was only a Somerville schoolgirl when her dancing ability won her a chance on Broadway. It was as Theo Pnane she won Broadway success, only to become Frances Grant when Hollywood found her.

As Frances Grant she nearly reached screen heights before disappointments struck and she was "let out" in a consolidation of 20th Century and Fox studios.

Today she begins all over at RKO Boston Theater as a talented dancer with N. T. G. and his Broadway Revue.

Your task—a financially fruitful one—is to strike on the name under which she hopes to win choice her way to a new success.

In addition to the $25 award there will be 25 pairs of tickets to RKO Boston Theater as consolation prizes for those who submit attractive names.

Frances hopes to dance her way to her former Broadway successes—but she wants to do it under a name that is going to mean something, if and when Hollywood beckons again.

Quite frankly, she admits she would like the screen to beckon her again, but this time she isn't going to sign a film contract until her name is firmly established.

So Boston has the chance to rename Frances Grant.—and the reward is $25.

The contest is at it open and you may send in as many names as you wish. Mail your suggestions to the "Frances Grant" Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square Boston

Frances Grant, Somerville girl, whose jaunt to film success was cut short, looks over the hundreds of letters that have arrived with suggestions for her new name. She opens today at the RKO-Boston Theater in N. T. G.'s Broadway Revue in her second attempt at stardom. But she wants a new name. Send that letter to the Boston Evening American today, with your choice of a name. Details in the accompanying story.

Sea-Going Feline Tale Tops British

By ROBERT L. GREEN

As a matter of national pride the American Merchant Marine stands ready to match its British rival, cat for cat, and then some.

It seems yesterday that the seamanship of five cats who arrived on the bridge of the coal collier Baron Haig was being extolled. This rankled with Boston seamen, who came up with a story of some real American seafarin' felines.

The United States liner American Shipper has a family of real sea going cats, was the proud boast. And these cats, unlike the alleged's pampered pets of the Baron Haig, are not permitted the freedom of the bridge and warm officers quarters.

Proving the hardy qualities of the American breed it was claimed that at the height of a storm one of the family gave an untried action sent to the wave swept deck while the crew battened hatches.

Another member of the famous crew of contempt for danger ended disastrously, however, when a cargo of it squeezed out its life against a hatch combing.

The mother of the family nearly lost her life on the same tragedy when in an unofficial attempt to rescue her tookens and she suffered a painful injured mouth and crew members found that she had suffered several broken teeth that made it impossible for her to eat. A resourceful ship carpenter, however, remedied that with a pair of pliers.

The Baron Haig's five cats are a chief remain from the dozen that the late Captain John McLean used to carry on his bridge in his offcer quest trips to Boston

Concord Fight Up To Legislature

A special board will report to the Legislature on the dispute raging over public access to White Pond in Concord.

Public right of way to the pond and public bathing tests have been restricted by the White Pond Association, organized by property owner in 1931. The pond belongs to the state.

The special board today heard arguments. Twelve opposed resolutions have signed a petition urging public access to the pond and 23 have filed in opposition, declaring that, prior to the organization of the White Pond Association in 1931, it was impossible to control rowdyism and trespassing by bathers.

Those urging free access point out that a public bathing beach existed prior to the association's organization for years back to horse and buggy days. No association or other organization has any right to sell tickets for bathing privileges at any great pond owned by the state they point out.

Included among those urging free access are Curtis Hayes chief game warden of the division of fisheries and game and Angelo Iacobucci, prosecutor of the Concord Pool and Fish Club.

Members of the special board, who must report to the Legislature by Jan. 1 are Richard K. Hale, assistant counsel of the state Department of Public Works, and Arthur A. Ahearn, Assistant Attorney General Walter W. O'Connell.

Tufts' Medical Unit Drive On

Doctors in eight New England cities gathered at meetings today to start the drive for a $2,000,000 building fund for a new Tufts medical school building in Boston. 166 alumni of Tufts attended a luncheon at the Copley-Plaza.

Following the series of eight luncheons, a sound picture show was given in person in each of the cities. Dr. Frederick Tisdall of the Tufts Institute of Pediatrics will be the principal speaker at each of the luncheons. Dr. Warren Stearns and C. H. Ingraham. They made the trip to Boston by plane.

The new medical school will be a modern building on the New England Medical Center project. Tufts will be able to use the unexpended record of $500,000 in the Lewis family if plans and drawings are per form a "practicable" use.

Prizes for Weather Prophets

Calling all prognosticators! Are you a weather prophet?

Most of us are, in our amateur way. Most of us are ready to predict tomorrow's weather at the drop of the thermometer. But here's your chance to see if you're really good at telling whether Old Sol will shine tomorrow or whether we'll be rained in by a hurricane.

If you've ever rocked a weather eye aloft, sniffed the ozone or measured the tilt of a cloud, you'll want to get in on this weather guessing contest, which was suggested by the new Samuel Goldwyn hit, "The Hurricane," now playing at the Colonial theater, and which is being sponsored by the Boston Evening American.

WHAT'S YOUR GUESS?

The contest offers attractive prizes to those making the most accurate forecast of the weather for tomorrow.

Here's how to join. Simply state what you think the weather will be for tomorrow. Will it be fair, colder, rain, cloudy, warmer, showers, partly cloudy, unchanged, hail or snow? Then mail your letter to "The Hurricane" Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston Mass

Letters postmarked later than midnight of the day before the prediction will be disqualified

NOW—RAIN OR SNOW?

To the first 15 weather forecasters rating the highest daily average of true predictions, the Boston Evening American will award the following prizes

A cash award of $2 each to the first five.

Come on, you weather prognosticators! Here is your chance to make predictions pay. Best guessers will share in cash awards or tickets to "The Hurricane," now playing at the Colonial Theater. Predictions must be mailed before midnight of day for which you are picking the weather. Photo shows Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall and Teri in scene from the play.

Dorothy Lamour and Jon Hall play the leading roles in "The Hurricane," which was directed by John Ford, and which reveals such favorites as Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, Raymond Massey and Jerome Cowan among the important featured players.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

I have seen so many stories about "les amis d'Escoffier" in the public prints of late that it looks as if a reunion of the gastronomic is threatening us. The brilliant and mannered Lucius Beebe, whose constituency of Park Avenue he represents all one of the New York papers he who at Harvard was STRICTLY A BEANO PARTY what in those days was called "the rope" and who is built squat silk hat and is expected to be a beauty in ermine, has been writing quite a good bit about the New York season of the select company of gourmands, who eat ritually with their napkins tied around the neck.

Robert E. Rogers

The Boston branch or lodge or local, of which the whole delegates seem to me Messrs. E. Sohier Welch and Russell Wheeler, may not be as specialized as the New York aggregation, but they serve

Patron Saint Of Serious Drinkers

We haven't so many hotels as there are in New York and, therefore, not so many famous cordons bleu who can be trusted to turn out a proper dinner with all the fixings (not to forget the wines!) but the way the friends of M. Escoffier have caught on of recent years shows that here we are not so far behind in the matter of good eating.

I do not know much about this man Escoffier. I am not even sure that he is Escoffier and not D'Escoffier. He seems not to be in the Britannica, the Columbia, or even the big Funk and Wagnalls' many sources of information at the moment. I take it that he was a famous cake cook, French, I reckon. I remember faintly having heard that he visited New York early in the nineteenth century, drank his boots completely under the table, and had some reputation as a gambler as well as a gourmet.

But I may be—and probably am—wrong. Anyway, he seems to be the patron saint of a select little groups of serious drinkers, who deny themselves cigarettes at meals, tuck in their napkins, and unfold reverentially to the genealogy, history, ingredients, and methods of cooking of the dishes they partake of.

Eat Lamb? Then Dress In Sheep's Clothing

I don't object to the fact that the aura of the dead past seems to hover over such ceremonies, something that seems better to fit with tight, strapped trousers and coats with rolling collars and long swallow tails, or with pelisses and spencers and basques and bustles among the gentler sex. I suppose that one can eat swell food in modern costume, just as one can act "Julius Caesar" in Fascist clothing.

What I do question a bit is that the whole proceedings seem a trifle unAmerican. Why is the late M. Escoffier the only one to be honored with friends and an organization? It is rather like questioning the significance of the Charles Townsend Copeland Alumni Association which functions annually at the Harvard Club in New York. Why not one dedicated to Russ Perry or John Livingston Lowes?

Why not, in other words, a club calling itself Les Amis de Chuck? Or Les Amis de Waldorf? Or Walton's? Or Jake Wirth's? Or Frank Locke's? I can see, in my mind's eye, Horatio, a ceremonial dinner where the guests wade into the pig's feet or the bratwurst, washing it down with amber seidels of cool beer and topping it off with apfel strudel and cheese. Of course they will tie their napkins around their necks and refrain from smoking. But, save that the menu is German instead of French, I do not see but what it is quite as American as the foods and wines served to the friends of Escoffier.

Let's Go American On the Cooking

Better still, perhaps, a ceremonial dinner of baked beans, brownbread, and fish balls, perpetrated, apple pie and milk. Or one of Dutch country sausage, scrapple, Chesapeake oysters and apple jack. I can think of any number of combinations. Or roast beef, Yorkshire pudding, Brussel sprouts, and plum pudding. I fail to see the bond between good eating (good dining, if you prefer) and a competely French menu. It seems to me limited, ungenerous, and a little snobbish.

In the appendix of "A Tramp Abroad" Mark Twain once listed the American foods with which he would like to be met at the dock on his return from Europe. It is a gargantuan list. Why not round up some "Amis de Samuel L. Clemens," a highly distinguished and selective group of a few millions, and serve that meal? Subscribers may smoke if they wish and use napkins or not as they please.

Plan Extra Hall For Big Beano Game Crowds

155 to Share Prizes At Gala Affair For Charity

Arrangements perfected for the charity beano party to be conducted in the Boston Garden Saturday night, December 11, include plans for handling as large a crowd as ever assembled in the structure.

In the event the main hall is unable to accommodate the crowds plans have been made to secure the exhibition hall in the North Station Industrial building will be used.

Chairman O'Rourke of the general committee announces that there are no special programs or other extraneous features connected with the affair.

It will be strictly a beano party and concert with the players entitled to play until 155 winners have scored.

Tickets at $1 each can be purchased from a large staff of ticket sellers located in all sections of the city and suburbs.

No person is authorized to solicit contributions for anything connected with the party. In the event anyone represents himself as doing this, Chairman O'Rourke declares he will appreciate a phone call to the general headquarters in the Parker House, Capitol 5877.

This party planned as the greatest beano party in the history of New England has been arranged for the purpose of providing cheer to the needy on Christmas day.

The Boston Evening American-Boston Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund was decided as the most worthy of all local charitable efforts at this time.

WILL AID THE NEEDY

Hence arrangements were perfected whereby the Boston Evening American-Boston Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund is to receive 10 per cent of the proceeds for use in its basket distributions.

Church and other charitable organizations will be treated separately.

Relief is held by Chairman O'Rourke who is chief ranger of St. Augustine's Court M. C. O. F. that it will be the most successful undertaking of its kind in New England this year.

In downtown Boston tickets may be had either at the general headquarters, room 378, the Parker House, or in the foyer of the Normandie ball room, Washington street, where volunteers are conducting the sale.

Cambridge Listing Inquest Delayed

An inquest into 750 fake polls listing cards in Cambridge has been continued indefinitely by Judge Robert Frost of East Cambridge district court at the request of Moster B. Goldberg, assistant city solicitor of Cambridge, who wants more time for investigation.

Daniel P. Leahy, an election commissioner, told the court he wanted to trace cards, bearing forged signatures of policemen and names of potential "voters," whose addresses were vacant lots and empty buildings.

More good news for next Sunday night, when the big Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund party is held at the popular Penthouse atop the Hotel Bradford.

And this good news is that the famed N T G—Nils T. Granlund the King of Broadway night life, and The Three Lovelies from the Broadway Midnight Frolics opening today at the RKO Boston will be in the Sunday night show.

It is a marvelous lineup of talent assembled so far to help the Christmas Basket benefit at the Penthouse by Tom Maren, talent ready and willing to do their best in charity's name.

VARIETY ANSURED

Maren's own floor show at the Penthouse, the new "International Varieties" which opened there last Monday will form the nucleus, and other star performers from the Boston stages, the broadcast studios and from roof and floor shows will take part.

Among the performers will be Frank Ward and his Rhythm of the Dawn Orchestra with the famous Carmen Trudeau the solo-ing Arden Chatterton dancers Tom Foran and the Tiffany Sisters Ora and Moreira, starring as guests, Estes and Borgia, dancers Raymond Pike, juggler and a cast of balance, the Ten Continental Beauties the glamorous Gwen Marlow, the most perfectly formed girl in England; the dancing Hall Sisters Meta Claire and Alma Alma Brat beautiful trapeze girl in a breath-taking execution and Irene Holland and Aileen Barry dance specialists.

Roota McKenna famed Broadway and Hollywood pit singer will whipped the new Intercontinental Revues into shape and the award reciving is Harry Reid.

DANCE ON PROGRAM

Quick-triggered Joe Ruhm both of the fun comedian, Ruhm will be master of ceremonies for the Basket Fund party.

At the Penthouse Tom Sunday night, you'll have a fine floor show, with general dancing afterward until the small hours of the morning and with a full course dinner served during the evening.

All for the astonishingly low price of $2.50 a person—five solid hours of matchless entertainment at only half a dollar an hour.

Don't miss the Sunday night party, because you will be aiding families such as the one described in this letter to the Basket Fund editor.

"I am writing to ask your help to make our Christmas happy. We would be very thankful to receive a basket.

"My father died a year ago, leaving my mother working hard nights trying to support us.

"There are five children in our family. My grandmother and grandfather live with us also. My grandmother is an invalid and hasn't been out for four years.

"With the in one my mother makes we can hardly get along and we would be very happy if you would kindly remember us at Christmas."

So much for that Goodfellows NOW—TODAY. Send your contributions to the Christmas Basket Fund Editor, 13 Otis street, Boston, and leave them there personally. If you would prefer, however, you can ask for the names and addresses of one or more destitute families and furnish the Christmas baskets to them direct.

In connection with applications for baskets—which should be addressed the same way—applicants are instructed to obtain the endorsement of their priest, minister, rabbi, children a teacher or the family doctor.

Carmen Trudeau, vocalist, appearing with Frank Ward at the Penthouse, will do her part to make the Christmas Basket Fund show on Sunday night a success.

Nils T. Granlund, (N. T. G.), often called the "King of Broadway Night Life," with some of his pretty girls, will come over from the Keith Boston Theater next Sunday night to help whoop it up for the Boston Evening American Basket Fund. The place—The Penthouse—atop the Ho[tel] Bradford. Be there to help the cause of good Christmas cheer to the needy.

Brighton Food Strike Hits Junior High

1000 More Boycott Taft Lunch Room In New Protest

With Brighton high school students again carrying their own snacks, the strike against school luncheon prices spread today to the William Howard Taft junior high school, just across the street.

Between 900 and 1000 students at the intermediate school also brought their luncheons today, only 3 lunch-room tickets being sold.

But unlike Principal Herbert T. Rich of the senior school, who has maintained a calm attitude and is strictly neutral, Headmaster Sidney T. Northcott of the interfediate appeared disturbed at his flock's following the older students' move.

REFUSES COMMENT

Northcott refused to make any statement, ordered newspapermen out of the building and threatened to call police if they did not obey.

Pupils at the junior high have about the same menu as those in the senior high school, both lunch rooms being operated by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union.

Cost of them in the boycott drive is the price of hot dogs recently upped from a nickel to seven cents.

Miss D. B. Tyson, director of the lunch-room said that prices cannot be lowered without losing money. The luncheon is one of 30 operated in the school system by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union and does not come under the jurisdiction of Edward M. Sullivan, business manager of the school system.

LUNCHROOM PRICES

Prices at the lunchroom include Corn Chowder, five cents; baked beans, seven cents, all sandwiches except peanut butte and jelly and jam, five cents (these are three cents); milk, five cents; pudding five cents; baked potato, five cents hotdogs seven cents.

Allston Boys Held In Garage Break

Two Allston boys, 19 and 15, were held by police of the Brighton station today after an attempted break at the Western Auto Sales & Service garage, Western avenue, Allston.

Police said that Joseph Maguzzu of California ave., Newton, captured the younger boy while the other hailed after the owner. John Maguzzu, fired a warning shot. A diagram of the garage was found in the pockets of the older boy.

Petitions to End Mutuels on File

Two petitions of the New England Anti-Gambling Association, Inc., designed to abolish pari-mutuel betting in Massachusetts containing 63,882 names, are on file today. Another petition of the association, to repeal the law permitting pari-mutuel betting on dog races only, now has 28,146 names.

WARNING

The Boston Evening American-Boston Sunday Advertiser Christmas Basket Fund employs no canvassers, no solicitors and no workers of any kind to collect funds from house-to-house, from office-to-office or in the street.

Neither does it authorize the solicitation of advertising in any programs, for any events, in its name.

If any such canvasser solicits you in your home, your office or in the street in the name of the Basket Fund, notify police or call the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser city editor at Liberty 4000.

Langone Seeks Connolly Probe

State Senator Joseph A Langone today moved for a legislative investigation of the office of Clerk John Patrick Connolly of Suffolk superior civil court.

He filed with the clerk of the state Senate an order calling for creation of a special legislative commission for the inquiry.

Based on charges made last spring by Florence Birmingham the order requested investigation of charges that Connolly dismissed persons who failed to contribute money to hold their jobs.

Langone called at the office of Attorney-General Paul A. Dever to obtain copies of the formal charges file and he had been told the complaints had been turned over to the Attorney-General through the office of District Attorney William J. Foley, with whom they were lodged.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Marjorie McBride

Unless you have business with him you don't see Kenneth B. Bowers when you stop at the Hotel Statler. He's chief steward, and he and his army of assistants perform their magic below stairs and out of sight. But he knows all about you . . . and thousands like you.

MARJORIE McBRIDE

Mr. Bowers is an intelligent observer of the social scene. Caught in an idle moment by a reporter, he will comment in a most interesting fashion upon the habits of people and the philosophy of hotel managers. In a matter-of-fact way, he'll tell you hotel stewards have women in mind when they plan their meals.

Women decide where their guests are to eat, and frequently what. For the same reason, hotels don't try to achieve that "home cooking" touch. A woman who has just escaped from a kitchen range or a grumbling cook wants something different.

It is his observation that women are drinking hard liquor more consistently than men. Not more, necessarily, for they don't get out as often. After a football game, for instance, he finds the men drink beer and the women ask for highballs and cocktails.

Bostonians Looking to Grape; Sweet Wines Back in Favor

He thinks Boston is more wine-conscious than it has been for many years. Sweet wines are coming back into favor. Sauterne is used more than it has been since before the war. Chief Steward Bowers does feel that for the holidays, with turkey on the table, dry red burgundy is the thing to serve. It is just a suggestion, because he drinks only water!

Other comments: Elsewhere, ice-cream is a year-around dessert, but in Boston they ask for pie in the winter . . . there's not as much dieting and calory counting as there was . . . the "lifting" of hotel property goes merrily on . . . they take little whiskey decanters, oyster forks and demi tasse spoons, for choice.

Two little maids from India, now studying psychology and sociology at Boston University, don't know whether to sob or scream when they watch the hugging and kissing that usually mark the American motion picture. In their country, the home-grown Indian pictures usually concern themselves with social problems, patriotism and religion.

They're Kambuen and Chanduben Parekh, who come from an East Indian town not very far from Bombay. Graduates of All-India Women's University, they spent last year in research work at Mills College in California. They are in the Graduate School at B. U. And still trying to reconcile the America they see around them and the movie, a world in which the strong and silent young man and the beautiful girl always end in a clinch just before the news-reel.

People scribble the strangest things while talking over the telephone. The other night, Girl About Town waited five minutes outside a booth at the Ritz for a "ritzy" young man to conclude a conversation. He kept scribbling while he talked. When he came out, he left the scrawls behind him. They read:

"I love you . . . Omaha is a lousy town . . . I love you . . . Got to go to Omaha . . . I love you . . . watch out for Freddy . . . Omaha . . ."

Comedy or tragedy? Or just plain nervousness?

Send the Joke Back to England, Only Term It 'Waistcoat'

Vaudeville comics are about to lose one of their favorite quips. Up in Rochester, N. Y., one Will Kirk has shown that by feeding a special mixture to hens, he can pre-determine the color of the yolk of an egg. And the careless eater can just eat eggs with yolks that match his vest.

Something New as Gift, Sheepskin Muff for Feet

Suggestions for Christmas shoppers who have sports lovers on their lists: At Filene's, a novelty is a foot muff, useful on long auto rides or at hockey games. It's of sheepskin, and you can snuggle both feet into it. Costs $1.39. At Jordan Marsh's, an unusual gift is the "spectator's cane." Good on mountain climbs or for watching ski or toboggan contests. Just spike it in the ground, touch the handle, and it opens up into a very acceptable seat. Comes at $5. Siegel's Shoe Store in Summer street is displaying snow boots of stout elk skin, lined in colorful plaids at only $2.95. Hooded parkas of sail cloth in various colors and in sizes for both men and women are featured at the Brine's Athletic Goods store. They range in price from $5.50 to $16.

Officer Burned, Saves 3

Patrolman Frank Gannon of Brighton police station was under treatment today for fire-seared hands and face, following heroic rescue of three women from flaming bedrooms in a St. Luke's road, Allston, apartment house.

Gannon battered down two doors to effect the rescues before arrival of firemen. He carried out Mrs. Mae Keating, a nurse, reaching her side as the bed burst in flames.

In spite of his burns he then went to the second floor and carried out Mrs. Catherine Whooley, 54, a sufferer from pneumonia. In a third trip he aided Marie Daniel, the woman's niece, and her nurse.

Captain John McGrath of Station 14 said he had written a letter to Superintendent Edward W. Fallon immediately, following the rescue recommending Gannon for the Departmental Medal of Honor.

Finds Criminals 'Understood' by Social Aides

Winslow Tells State Parley System Yields Valuable Data

Is the criminal as studied by the [illegible] social worker really [illegible] understood [illegible] the social worker?"

At the [illegible] session today of the Massachusetts Conference of Social Work at Hotel Statler, Richard S. Winslow of the Massachusetts Department of Correction said that he was [illegible]

Furthermore, he asserted that social work in prisons is looked upon with scorn "in too many instances."

State and local police were represented before the delegates as an intensive study was made of the relation between police function and social work by trained individuals.

CODDLING DENIED

Winslow said

"I have convincing factual evidence that the social work system operating at State Prison for the last six years—and at Norfolk and Concord—cannot be charged with being impractical coddling or extravagant."

Winslow expressed deep appreciation [illegible] social workers who came [illegible] in 1931 and reduced [illegible] to a lower percentage than any other [illegible] system [illegible]

He added:

"Social workers, well trained, helped us to obtain prompt, accurate information on drug users, perverts, and 'trusties.' They have provided probation officers with complete, accurate information reducing state expense, time and effort."

PAROLES PRAISED

Ralph W. R[illegible] of the Massachusetts parole board [illegible] social workers that parole does not operate as a favor to the criminal. He said social workers, some of whom are opposed to it, often misunderstand the meaning of parole.

He said:

"Parole is a method of punishment but it is also a method of prevention. It is a constructive process of social rehabilitation.

"The accidental or occasional offender, who can be made over into a constructive and self-supporting member of society, may be utterly ruined—for life—by a long prison term."

Lieutenant Edward J. Keating, supervisor of cases, Boston police department, said crime [illegible] had reached a certain area where an efficient police department was the most necessary of a department to make the government of a city possible.

Wibur Star Explains Talk

Frederick Leister Sees Universal Language

"You say 'nee ther' I say 'nei ther' let's call the whole thing off" might be the keynote of any conversation with an Englishman. But English actors and actresses have long set the style for perfection of diction and [illegible] plays here.

Therefore it was astonishing to hear Frederick Leister, who is playing the lead in "The House Master" which Milton Shubert is presenting in association with Rufus [illegible] at the Wilbur Theater with matinees on [illegible] and Saturdays and who is an English actor of fame and renown, say [illegible]

Mr. Leister [illegible]

[illegible]

"In England we say 'leftenant' for the army and 'loo-tenant' for the navy. 'The Flag Lieutenant' was a grand naval spectacle, with boats and water right on the stage. It wasn't until many years after that I played in another such elaborate show, 'The White Horse Inn,' in which I impersonated the old Austrian emperor, Franz Joseph."

Any questions about pronunciation [illegible] That is [illegible] understand [illegible] of people, said Mr. [illegible]

Even in England, extreme pronunciation is frowned upon and the long drawn out drawl, exaggerated vowels spoken with dropped jaws, is out. It indicates a relaxation not at all in keeping with modern times, and instead of a man sounding as though he were yawning between words, we have adopted a certain crisp, clipped quality in our speech that Americans have."

She's Revue Star

Gala Cast For New Musical

"Between the Devil," new musical by Howard Dietz and Arthur Schwartz with three brilliant English musical comedy stars, Jack Buchanan, Evelyn Laye and Adele Dixon, will be the offering of the Shuberts at the Shubert theater for two weeks, beginning Tuesday. Following the Shubert policy, "Between the Devil" will go from Boston to New York.

Mr. Buchanan, here five or six years ago in the first Charlot revue, is no stranger to American theater audiences. Miss Laye was brought to this country by Florenz Ziegfeld to create the leading role in "Bitter Sweet." Since then she has spent most of professional time between Hollywood, the British studios and the London stage.

Miss Dixon is making her debut on this side of the water. She is a young and talented star of the English stage who has played both in legitimate and musical productions. She was especially engaged for this play. In fact, the role of the French actress was written with her in mind.

Benefit Show For the Needy

Patrons of Max Michaels' first midnight show at the Columbia scheduled for Friday night, December 17, indirectly will be buying shoes for Boston's underprivileged school children. It is for this purpose that Manager Michaels is conducting this particular benefit, an annual event that is his particular hobby.

While doing a good deed, attendants at this benefit performance are promised a spectacularly entertaining show. In addition to the [illegible] Columbia Theater burlesque and vaudeville talent for that week, artists from Boston's leading night clubs and theaters have volunteered their services.

RKO Boston Plans More Vaudeville

Comment on the 10-act vaudeville show presented last week at the RKO Boston has been so enthusiastic that the management has arranged to present another of this type of show the week beginning Thursday, December 9.

BETTER TO EAT, MY DEAR:

The agent was almost apologetic when he offered an actor who had seen rosier days a job with "very small money."

"But how small?" demanded the actor.

"Very, very small," moaned the agent.

"Name the figure," the actor insisted.

The agent was still hesitant. Then he took a deep breath and came to the point.

"Let's forget about the money. There's a table scene in the second act."

Goldwyn's 'Festival' Started

Fannie Hurst Story Will Have Sterling Cast on Screen

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 2—My enthusiastic friend, Samuel Goldwyn, no more than finished "Goldwyn Follies" than he starts concentrating on "The Music Festival," which he bought from Fannie Hurst some months ago for Violinist Jascha Heifetz.

I am delighted to say that my little friend, Andrea Leeds, draws the feminine lead with Sam really going to town for a supporting cast that will tap the Goldwyn bankroll to many thousands. Included are Helen Jepson, Zorina, the dancer, and George Balanchine's ballet.

Chester Morris is a good actor who hasn't been getting the right breaks. But RKO is going to do something about that by not only putting Chester under long term contract but also purchasing his first big Broadway stage success, [illegible] by Samuel Shipman and John Hymer, as the starter on his comeback trail. Interesting to remember that in the stage show with Chester were Sylvia Sidney, Kay Francis, Kay Johnson and Jack LaRue. But when Robert Sisk brings it to the screen little Anne Shirley will have the femme lead with Eduardo Ciannelli, [illegible] LaRue and Lew Landers directing.

Really sad news for the Hollywood friends of Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon, that they won't be here for Christmas. They are just concluding a six-week tour of South Africa which brought them the most amazing success. You've never read such notices as were printed in the Johannesburg newspapers enthusiastically praising them and their act.

Ben encloses Kodak pictures taken with doctors and natives which are very interesting. Bebe, Ben and Barbara, Bebe's then six year old daughter, and in England December 31. They then go on a tour of the provinces and will not return until next Summer, which means that they will have been away from home for two years.

Chatter in Hollywood: Paulette Goddard and RKO are talking contract. She lunched with Pandro Berman, production chief of this studio on Tuesday and chances are that she will sign the papers that will make her an RKO star before many days. A Paulette needs new Charlie Chaplin's consent to make a picture away from his direction.

He has heretofore refused to let her sign an outside contract on the plea that he wanted her to work with him but he seems no nearer a definite story than he was a year ago, and even that motion [illegible] Hollywood [illegible]

Ginger Rogers and Adolphe Menjou are among the most versatile stars in Hollywood and they turn in sterling performances in the screen version of "Stage Door" which has been held over for a second week at the Keith Memorial.

Keith Hit Is Held Over

Fred Stone in 'Quick Money' New Film On Program

The enthusiastic public reception of RKO Radio's "Stage Door," co-starring Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers and Adolphe Menjou has prompted the management of Keith Memorial theater to hold the film over for a second week, beginning today. A new companion feature, Fred Stone in "Quick Money" has been booked for the convenience of the thousands who have expressed a desire to see "Stage Door" for a second time.

The story of "Stage Door" embraces the varied experiences of a group of ambitious girls residing in a theatrical boarding house in New York vividly revealing their hopes, tragedies and triumphs as they valiantly seek fame and fortune on the Great White Way. The spotlight is focused on an imperious society beauty who has run away from home to satisfy a longing for the theater and upon a resourceful youngster with unusual dancing ability.

When the society beauty wins a coveted role in a Broadway production because her father secretly finances the play, another girl, who has aspired to portray the role, breaks under the strain and commits suicide. [illegible]

Yehudi Menuhin Soloist At Morning Musicale

By RUTH MARSTERS

Menuhin, you remember, is the violinist who was the child prodigy of some time ago. Now he is regained but our spirit is chastened.

Everybody, and there were lots of people at yesterday's Boston Morning Musicale, remained so calm before the fact that he was regained that our own jubilation was not only "de trop" but downright childish.

Following two years' retirement Menuhin appeared on the stage of the Statler ballroom, tall, trim and tanned. To be sure he still looks more like a musician than an athlete but there is no longer any trace of the pudgy prodigy.

Here he is. An artist of matured perception and poise born of selflessness. He has lost none of his brilliant virtuosity. At the moment he fills an important place in music, for he is the torch-bearer of a new generation of violinists.

That delightful and rarely heard work, Mozart's Sonata No. 32 in F major, first on the program, immediately emphasized the fact.

The freshness of [illegible] and sweet sense of phrasing which Menuhin brought to it were only the particulars necessary but subjugated to his broader conception of the work.

It was unfortunate that accompanist Ferguson Webster [illegible] a meticulous pianist [illegible] underplayed. The result was a lack of balance between the two instruments to the detriment of the music itself.

The Bach Sonata in G minor for violin alone was a heavy one for a morning audience. The difficulties attendant upon the performance of Bach's great sonatas for the solo violin are recognized. What should be more greatly stressed are the difficulties attendant upon attending. Experience is necessary in both cases.

Following the intermission there was the exquisite [illegible] [illegible] Menuhin will [illegible] again [illegible] Symphony Orchestra [illegible] ward to that.

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

On they come, in unending procession, the guest artists who fill the air castle corridors night in and night out. Sponsors spare no cost in seeking the brightest stage stars for folks at home to hear.

Radioland is a heaven of golden glory and one wonders if there will be enough guest stars to go around over a much longer broadcasting period.

N. F. T.

Each big broadcast takes shape with the preconceived idea that some novel name other than the personality of the program be brought forth from time to time as the exposition is becoming more than one can absorb. This method of the network putting faster feet ahead of the sponsor's program is the better of wishing adequate protection for the entertainer. Only so much can be said concerning the genius of performers and the terms of praise that can be used before the listener has had enough.

MAILING HOLTZ

And perhaps that is the best, or one way of making known what Rudy Vallee means as a star, from the extraordinary publicity Lou Holtz is receiving from start again (WNAC) this evening between 8 and 9 o'clock.

Lou is credited as the first to have lost control of his mirth when Rudy Vallee had him as a guest on Rudy's broadcast, picking up new names as he ad-libbed, so lets just hope Lou has a hard time to-night. Which case he will. Lou knows and can't be the Vallee summons for his arrival.

Hubbard Scores Radio Scandal Mongering

Producer Suggests Sponsors Stop Radio Gossips

Special to Boston Evening American

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Dec. 2—To the rapidly swelling list of film luminaries who have voiced their indignation at radio scandal mongering was added this same today of Lucien Hubbard, producer.

"From Bangor to Buena Vista and from St. Petersburg to Seattle," he said, "interest in the comings and goings of motion picture people is at a high pitch. But the tearing down of their screen favorites is not what fans want to hear, especially when this tearing down is done with malice aforethought and without regard for truth.

ATTACKS FROM BEHIND

"Radio gossips have a deadly weapon in their possession when they are able to vindictively broadcast half truths and bald lies about film people. They are not attacking from behind and the motion picture industry and its people have no means of redress. They are forced to stand helplessly by while they are impugned with a viciousness that is appalling."

He also declared that the present attack on picture's an organized campaign is the result of a few objective gossips maintaining them-selves at the expense of a ungodly industry.

"Why don't the sponsors themselves step in as censors of their commentators' remarks?" he asked.

BAD STATE

"Aside from a purely business standpoint, the tattlers' abuse of film personalities is a remarkable display of bad taste. Behind-the-back whispers are bad enough when they are just that, but when these whispers, of which 99 per cent are untrue, become a shout to millions of people by a loud speaker, it becomes gross manners."

Hubbard a pioneer in the film industry and owner of the El Rancho ranch near Palm Springs, expressed the hope that the commentators would voluntarily clean up it from the programs so that the producers and the public would not be forced to take drastic means for quelling of the evil.

Plan Yule Party For Convalescents

Constance Manning was chairman of arrangements for the card party attended by more than 150 persons last night at St. John's clubhouse on Washington street Wellesley. She was assisted by Gladys Whalen and Olive Sloman. Local merchants donated prizes.

Shaw Urges Trip To U. S. for Windsors

LONDON, Dec 2 (AP)—George Bernard Shaw today urged the Duke and Duchess of Windsor to visit the United States.

Their postponed trip, the dramatist wrote in a Glasgow newspaper, "would have been useful diplomatically and commercially."

The paper demanded that the British government bring the Windsors back to England before "Prince Charming has to become a Wandering Jew."

Foresters to Give Christmas Gifts

Distribution of gifts and a program of entertainment at Christmas time for children of nine Catholic institutions of the city will be conducted by the Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, through a large committee of past chief rangers. It was announced by High Chief Ranger Joseph A. Cahalan.

AUSTEN LAKE

Pro Profits: Ski Victim: Babe's Beef: Mat Truce: H Election

AUTOPSICAL DATA GIVES PROOF THAT Boston will not foster pro football. Here is orchidaceous George P. Marshall, the wealthy scrubman who made five consecutive boxoffice failures in Boston, cleaning up $110,000 in a still unfinished season at Washington. And there are the Boston Shamrocks, which played to a scant coroner's jury in their Fenway games, drawing 28,000 at Los Angeles. The answer is that Boston, educated to the pageantry, youthful enthusiasm and tradition of college football, will not support the dull, mechanical efficiency and clinical artificialities of the pro game.

AUSTEN LAKE

The last squirt of fake-snow had been hosed over the Garden's ski-chute and the hump-backed slope which is a feature of the Ice Carnival was a glitter of frozen crystals. A small knot of imported ski experts stood on the take-off platform just under the roof rafters, arguing over the honor of being first to christen the lethal slide. They tossed and Wendelin Hilty of Switzerland won. Down he shot, leaning over his runners which squeaked on the loose packed granules. He reached the bottom of the dizzy pitch safely, but failed to brake his speed in the short runway and wound up against the guard rail with a fractured collar bone. Bobby Sall, the midget auto racer whose body is a spider web of scars from old crackups at Carnival dirt tracks, was one of the watching gallery. "Those guys are nuts," said Bobby.

Babe Ruth's Revenge

WHEN LEAN AND WIND-BURNED GABBY STREET got the manager's post with the St. Louis Browns, Babe Ruth, embittered candidate, swore that he would never again enter a ball park until some major league magnate granted his heart's desire. Babe still harbors the mistaken notion that baseball owes him an executive appointment. Baseball owes him nothing that it has not paid in proportion. He had the good luck to mature soon after the industry needed the standard baseball and home runs, which had been almost as rare as a straight flush in poker, became common, though not commonplace. The customers loved the illusion of the home run and refused to believe that the ball which Babe hunted over the outfield walls was any different than the 'possum missles which were used when a dozen homers were an individual record. The change and restriction imposed on the pitchers had much to do with the Babe's development as one of the most significant Americans of our day. He gained a million dollars for his art and another million from his reputation. And though, undeniably he did the game much good, the game did him no less and the ledger was balanced. Still some of the major league slum teams could have done themselves a boxoffice favor by naming the Babe for a term or two. It would have made them some money and satisfied the Babe's curiosity about himself.

Mat Truce

During the past week the feudal chiefs of pro wrestling's humpty-dumpty have been in secret conclave in a New York hotel trying to put the pieces of the old Trust together as it existed before Dick Shikat shattered its shell by hi-jacking Danno O'Mahony's title. In the huddle were the firms of Bowser & Sandow, Fiddler Fabiani & Mondt and the "One-man" Pfeffer. An armistice was declared. But the problem which now confronts the Trust is to locate the whereabouts of the old title, which has been kidnaped, hocked and sold so often that it may now belong to some Moscow rag peddler. The Trust expects to trace it by the smell.

Harvard Football Captain

NEXT WEDNESDAY AT NOON THE HARVARD lettermen will gather in the Dillon Field house to elect a football captain. They will dress for the last time in their wine-colored regimentals and go into the lounge where the team manager, Bob T. Whitman, will speak the punctilio, time-honored formula, "Gentlemen do you wish to ballot?" Then the lettermen, 19 in number, will start to vote, each selecting his favorite candidate at random and without nominations. As the successive polls are made each time the man with the least number of votes is eliminated until some player gets a majority of the 19. This year more ballots may be required than usual for there are six possibilities in the running, Bobby Green, Don Daughters, Cliff Wilson, Chief Boston, Ken Booth and Austie Harding, all of whom have played in the last two Yale games. Green may be the man.

The Garden has finally bagged its truant monkey after nearly two months of freedom among the girders . . . Just when the sport page type setters had breathed a sigh of relief as Fordham's Wojciechowicz finished the football season, along comes Tufts with another Wojciechowicz, captain of the basketball team . . . Pitt's malcontent varsity may have root Fordham its Rose Bowl chance. By demanding three items as the price of participation if invited, Pitt forced the selection of Alabama prematurely. Fordham was under consideration, but to another the upset caused by Pitt, Alabama was picked on impulse and rushed to the press . . . Fordham may get a consolation bid in the newly created Mummer's Bowl at Philadelphia on New Year's Day against Villanova, the Mummers being an old society which parades in fancy dress each January 1.

All-Scholastic Board Names Official Eleven For Boston American

All-Star Grid Team To Be Announced Saturday

The Boston Evening American 1937 All-Scholastic football team - regarded by schoolboys and schoolboy followers alike as the official eleven - will be announced in Saturday's Boston Evening American.

The All-Scholastic Board of Coaches, with a toss before them, a little easier than last year when the schoolboys' ranks were cut on with five players held their final meeting at the Locke Hotel.

As the only changes from last year, the Board agreed on picking Sullivan's backs whereas before it was necessary to place a tackle in the backfield and back on the ends.

Another noticeable mention, of which there were carried the names of a boy who played only one season, was omitted in order to give most prominent players more room for each player's individual record.

WIDE SCOPE

The Board of Coaches for this outstanding selection is made up of:

Bill Ohrenberger, Boston English.
Jim Mansfield, Haverhill high.
Edward "Skip" Sherlock, Hyde Park high.
Fred Ostergren, Arlington high.
Bill Broderick, Salem high.
Harry Downes, Quincy high.

This group covers the schools that competed in the Fall River Trade League, which is the Fall River schools, too schools in action and has been officiating outside games on Saturdays while Skip Sherlock is a star player in the district football league there over a two season.

North Shore eleven is represented by Bill Broderick, one of the outstanding players who has been in schoolboy football long enough to recognize a star on short notice. Mansfield, Boston suburban Boston, schools as Haverhill, plays a number of great Boston opponents.

COACHES KNOW

Fred Ostergren "covers" the Suburban schools completely with every boy who has played in any degree of recognition.

This board can't miss picking the very best of the All-Scholastic eleven.

From the bench, the coaches see many points that spectators and even experts must miss in a game.

When a schoolboy back breaks off for a long touchdown run, the spectator is watching the runner, whereas the coach is also watching for that boy who makes the key block with a fine block or a clever bit of deception.

The six members of the Board by passing coaches and officials and sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Education, which gives credit to the evening game of the season, and it has not been ruled to treatment.

GETLIFFE STAYS HOME

Trainer Win Green dug into his big trunks and came out with the knee brace that Perk Galbraith used to wear as a Bruin Getliffe tried it out and found it very much to his liking. He was anxious to make the Montreal trip, but it would not acquiesce.

Instead Getliffe will skate in Boston today and tomorrow and probably will be able to play against the champion Detroit Red Wings next Tuesday at the Garden.

Art Jackson will skate the Bruins first line left wing against Canadiens, teaming with Bill Cowley and Charley Sands. The Kitchener Kids will play the second line, and the third line will be centered by Captain Cooney Weiland with Roy Goldsworthy and Jack Beatle on the wings.

So as to be prepared for any further injury in Montreal, Boss had Flash Hollett skating in the forward line in practice. The big defenseman is a good rusher and a stick handler and Boss feels he will do a good job on the wing if he has to play him there.

Aside from Getliffe, Bruins are in good condition. Bruce's skate cut is healing nicely and has not interfered with his practice work outs. The entire team is well rested and quite confident it will take a very strong hockey club to break their present winning streak.

LAST MEETING, 14

The Bruins' last game with Canadiens was played in Boston and was a 1-1 tie. They then were embedding a schedule of six games in ten nights, and were a tired team. Canadiens play their home games on Mount Royal Forum ice, but the Bruins know they are better prepared for the French team than in their last meeting.

The Bruin squad will return to Boston tomorrow night, coming down from Montreal on the day train. There will be a light skating session on Saturday, and the team will go to New York on Sunday morning for their Rangers game. Bruins have played Rangers once before, winning 3-2 on Boston ice.

BILL BRODERICK — SKIP SHERLOCK — JIM MANSFIELD

Moulding an All-Scholastic eleven, the Boston Evening American Board of Coaches gathered for their final meeting at the Lenox Hotel. The official All-Team, which is picked by the board consisting of Jim Mansfield, Bill Ohrenberger, Fred Ostergren; Bill Broderick, Skip Sherlock and Harry Downes, will appear in Saturday's Boston Evening American.

Picking Them The Right Way

Ben Cantwell Sold to Montreal Club by Brooklyn

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 2 (INS) Oscar Melillo, veteran second baseman, was signed as a coach by the St. Louis Browns today after obtaining a release from the Boston Red Sox.

Long a star with the Browns, Melillo was traded to the Red Sox three years ago. He has been a coach as a player.

The Cincinnati Reds announced the signing of the veteran Hank Gowdy, as a coach and the release of Harvey Wakefield, regular last year, to Nashville of the Southern Association.

Gowdy, regarded as the Boston Braves, this follows a old line, Bill McKechnie to the Reds. McKechnie resigned as Boston's pilot after two months ago to take the Cincinnati job.

Cincinnati also concluded a work or agreement with Albany of the Yorks Pennsylvania League which today saved its change its name to the Eastern League.

Brown and Dobie has Ben Cantwell to Montreal of the International League and Sid Francis of the Pacific Coast League sent Outfielder Jones to Chattanooga of the Southern Association.

An even trade between the baseball Cubs and Fred Fitzsimmons, Brooklyn pitcher, and the Washington owner and Ed Lake to the Senators of Hagerty's old team.

Powell-Ostermueller Trade Hanging Fire

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 1—A three-cornered deal between the Red Sox, Tigers and White Sox was at long the five being today as the winter league meeting neared its close.

The transaction would send John Marcum to the Tigers for Marvin Owen and Jim Weaver to the White Sox would get Jim Wh ahead for Owen.

The Cronin interest a swinging deal to secure Buck Newsom, in the deal according to the preference of Mickey Cochrane, the Tiger boss was a ring however, when Cronin demanded Vernon Kennedy instead of Whitehead. Cronin was willing to deal for the big right hander. Thus for the moment the proposition is at a standstill.

The Yankees approached Cronin with an offer to trade Jake Powell, Jerry Cope, Providence ve Clay outfielder, for Fritz Ostermueller, pitcher.

It is believed the Yankees want Ostermueller to use in a deal with the Browns which would involve Menard, Woolsocket, four rounds Hoag and Cliff and Red Rolfe.

Fesler to Teach Basket Course At Rindge

Wesley Fesler, head coach of basketball at Harvard University, Edward M. "Smoker" Kelleher, honorary president of the National Basketball Officials, and George S. Clark, prominent hoop arbiter and basketball director at North Quincy High School will be the instructors in the first class on the new course, "Basketball Coaching" conducted

With the course "free" to the general public, the largest crowd ever to attend an indoor sporting event in the University City is expected to be in attendance.

At tonight's session, it is expected that the instructors will speak in detail on the new rules for the 1937-38 season.

More than likely, considerable time will be spent in explaining the "center tap" change. This new rule a radical change in the hoop game does away with most of the center jumping.

With the center tap eliminated in great part, new defensive and offensive systems must be established. Suggestions on how to build these systems are expected to be offered at the evening's get-together.

The course will be a weekly affair and is slated to last for some three months. Each week, three outstanding basketball authorities will address the class.

Larry Bolvin Gem Of Flyweights | Brilliant Career Of Pancho Villa

By JACK CONWAY

LARRY BOLVIN, sensational Providence 112-pounder who will represent New England in the finals of the Hearst All-Eastern amateur boxing championships at the Garden on next Monday night, will revive interest in the flyweight division.

Bolvin has boxing class and a punch, and if he keeps improving he will become a star in professional boxing when he graduates from the ranks of the amateurs.

Churchill used to conduct a saloon in Charlestown, and when his business became poor Frank got on a boat and ended up in Manilla.

While in Manilla, Churchill opened a boxing club. He promoted matches between local boxers, and occasionally featured an American or English boxer of note.

One day while Churchill was sitting in his office the door to the room opened, and a boy entered. The boy's clothes were in rags, his feet were bleeding, his face was tired and worn.

"Please give me work," pleaded the boy. "I am hungry. I ran away from a sugar plantation where I worked."

Churchill gave the boy some food and then gave him a job sweeping up around his club. The boy's name was Pancho Villa.

Starts Boxing at Churchill's Club

"Give me a chance, Mr. Churchill," said Pancho.

I never saw a boxer subjected to such a terrific beating as the one Villa administered to Wilde. Before the bout Wilde charged there was a plot to strip him of his title, and so the referee refused to stop the match until Wilde was knocked cold.

Villa always gave a [illegible]. He could box and punch, and was a splendid ring general.

Disaster overcame Pancho when at the peak of his career. He entered the ring with Jimmy McLarnin in San Francisco while suffering from an ulcerated tooth. Following the bout the doctors found that the poison had gone through Villa's slim body. Pancho died a few days later of blood poisoning.

Never Off Feet in 50 Fights, That's Albany's Vic Rodrigo

Baltimore to Send Finest Group Ever From South

By WALTER KILEY

"Beware, you Bostonians!"

That's the warning sent ahead as powerful boxing units from Baltimore and Albany prepare to leave for next Monday night's great Eastern finals of the William Randolph Hearst All-America amateur boxing championships at Boston Garden.

These two cities are only re-echoing the optimism of New York, Syracuse and Washington, which have already gone on record as to their victory chances.

If all these Eastern teams are only half as good in the ring as their followers are in their enthusiasm over them, the Garden show will be the greatest in New England history.

BROTHER PRO NOW

Last year Matt, a younger brother, [illegible] the All America [illegible] New York [illegible] East Boston [illegible] Matt [illegible] has forsaken the amateurs and is doing all right as a pro.

Charles [illegible] the boy who a year ago [illegible] the feather weight [illegible] of the All Ame[illegible] [illegible] this year [illegible] weight [illegible] additional experience [illegible] him through.

Albany has capable battlers in [illegible]

WON 60 OUT OF 70

"Sergeant" Perry, only colored fellow on the team, is the light heavy, a well set-up fellow who built up his short, hammer-like punches while officering in the National Guard.

Foremost is the only resident of Albany on the team. Nineteen years old, weighing 112, he has lost only 10 of some 70 battles.

Mario Severino of Schenectady, N. Y., is Albany's featherweight. He takes over for Frankie Mirabile who beat him in the finals, the latter accepting a last minute invitation to tour Europe on the A. A. U. team.

Don Perfetti, with a world of Panama Canal Zone experience in boxing, has a record of only two losses in 60 bouts.

RODRIGO THE CLASS

But perhaps the best of the entire Albany lot is flyweight Vic Rodrigo of Amsterdam, a bland baby face whose proud boast is that in more than 50 fights he's never felt the kiss of the canvas.

Baltimore feels its team is the best ever to come out of the South.

Heading the team is Tom [illegible], a bow [illegible] heavyweight. Then comes Jimmy Pea[illegible], sharpshooting Marine from Annapolis, a light heavy. Vince Pelfano is the only holdover, Baltimore champ of 1936. He's the middleweight.

the Eastern lightweights. Billy Savage, a slugging, two-fisted bantam, is, they insist, the best looking youngster Boston will see in years.

Perhaps none of the Baltimore contingent can slug like Dutch Farrington, the 126-pounder. None of his opponents came close to staying the limit with him in the Baltimore finals.

Ed Malan, who carried the National A. A. U. colors in the Garden last winter, is the 175-pound Baltimorean Petey Boyce, winner over two of the finest flyweights in the regions last week, comes on as champion of this division.

SYRACUSE TEAM

Office word from the Baltimore manager is that his team is hot, a [illegible] fast [illegible] crew and looking forward to smacking the other Eastern battlers around the ring.

[illegible] our Boston champions [illegible]

[illegible] champs Syracuse [illegible] Jimmy Brown 112, Bob Hartwell 126, [illegible] Pinti 118, Herbie Foutis 13[illegible], Cozy Storace 147; Ralph Costa 160, and Phil Vinci, light heavy, prove a heavy artillery [illegible] Sport Ed Bob Kenefick [illegible]

Regardless of claims and theories, must be good foundation for all of them—fast and furious bouts are on Monday's offering.

Perkins Named Tiger Scout

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 2 (AP)—The Detroit Tigers, second-place finisher in the American League for two seasons, are sick of [illegible] and are taking out insurance in the form of a high-powered scouting system that will put 10 full-time ivory hunters in the field.

Walter O. Briggs, owner of the Detroit baseball club since the death of Frank Navin, said in announcing the new set-up that the Tigers hoped to compete more successfully with the farm systems of the New York Yankees and the St. Louis Cardinals in spotting and garnering promising youngsters.

Cy Perkins, coach since Mickey Cochrane became Detroit manager, becomes a scout under this arrangement. Cochrane will replace him as first base coach and catcher. Heretofore Coach Del Baker, who will remain at the third base coaching box, called the signals.

This move was another indication that Cochrane is completely through as a catcher. For some time

Maloney Shooting for Top

Dick Maloney of South Boston will have plenty of incentives when he steps into the most important bout of his career with Larruping Lou Brouillard of Worcester, 12-round feature of the Goodwin A. C. boxing show at the Boston Garden one week from tomorrow night.

If Maloney gets by Larruping Lou he'll find several big bouts involving heavy chunks of money waiting for him, for Matchmaker Rip Valenti plans to bring in several of the leading light-heavyweights in the nation, including Champion John Henry Lewis.

Maloney's entire fistic future rests on the outcome of this bout. He'll go on shooting for the top if he comes through in this one.

Maloney is just as confident now as he was before the bout with Iron Man Max Marek.

The experts pointed out on that occasion that Shamus the Second, brother of Jim and new idol of South Boston, was being overmatched.

But Maloney gave the veteran Marek a beating for four rounds [illegible] which forced the referee to halt the bout.

Y M H A Plays Peever Club

The Boston Y. M. H. A. Saturday will present for the first time in Boston the Peever Club of Haverhill, which will try to stop the winning streak of the Boston five at the Seaver street gym.

The Peever Club last year defeated on its home floor the Georgia Chain Gang by 17 points, House of David by 10 points, St. James Holy Name Society and Malden City Club.

The Y M H A will be weakened for the game because Syl Grunwald, fast little forward who formerly played with Nat Holman in New York, has gone back to Gotham to accept a more lucrative position nearer home.

Czechoslovakian Skater Thrills Garden Spectators; Skier Breaks Collarbone

Thousands Turn Out For Snow Meet At Garden

By JOE CASHMAN

The European jumpers regard themselves as definitely superior to the American boys and the native borns virtually think the invaders all wet on that point.

The sliders, both Americans and Europeans, look down on all the jumpers. They contend that the lads who lean through the air with the greatest of ease know little or nothing of the real art of skiing.

THRILL A MINUTE

Absence of wind is one advantage. Even temperature is another. So the spectators who watch these wooden-headed artists at the depot see them at their very best.

M'Carron Boxes At Dilboy

Boxing tonight will be in the 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 and heavyweight classes all open. Russo has enough entries to insure over 20 bouts and another dynamic Dilboy tournament.

It will be the fourth Dilboy show and Russo finds them clicking so well that he shifts the scene of action tonight to the K. of C. hall in Somerville.

Man-Mountains In Garden Mat Semifinal

A pair of man-mountains [illegible] weight [illegible] pounds [illegible] Johnson, the 3?? pound [illegible] and Chief Ossy Saunooke, 225 pound [illegible] and full blooded Cherokee Indian will collide in the semi-final next Wednesday [illegible] head the wrestling bout at Boston Garden between Everett Marshall of La Junta, Col., world [illegible] champion, and George Dazzeo [illegible] challenger from Scotland.

Better yet, the Johnson-Saunooke [illegible] now [illegible] semi-final. It practically equals half of a double windup since it will be a one fall affair to a positive finish.

DREW WITH DANNO

"The Johnson-Saunooke battle is one the fans have demanded," Promoter Paul Bowser said. "My desk is piled high with letters asking for the match. I could very well have arranged it for the main event, and it would have drawn a huge crowd."

Both Johnson and Saunooke have carved out impressive records in Boston.

Johnson's stands out even better than the Indian's. He has been here longer and met and defeated tougher opponents.

Big Tom's crowning achievement in New England was a 90-minute draw with Dan O'Mahony, former world champion, at Worcester a few weeks ago.

Saunooke has appeared twice at the Garden. He scored in each before he had time to work up a perspiration. Neither opponent had a chance against him.

INDIAN IS FAST

Johnson will carry an advantage of 35 pounds or so against the Indian and may be a little stronger. Saunooke will have speed in his favor. The Indian is exceptionally agile for a man of his pounds, and he is a master of innumerable holds.

The Marshall-Clark battle is attracting a lot of attention, in that it will be the first severe test for the Coloradoan who, through his manager's efforts, fairly forced himself on Promoter Bowser and into the local wrestling picture.

Harvard's schedule until the Christmas vacation, when the annual battles with Clarkson at Lake Placid are held, will be relatively easy for the sextet, although Technology is reputedly much stronger than last season.

The opener with the Engineers next Tuesday will serve to show Coach Stubbs how best to fashion a team that will uphold the high reputation of recent squads in league competition.

Harvard's schedule calls for ten games to be played against league members Montreal, McGill, Princeton, Queens, Dartmouth, Toronto and Yale with two games being played against Princeton, Dartmouth and Yale in a round robin series.

Once again the Harvard team will be the guests of the Big Green at the annual Dartmouth Winter Carnival at Hanover. The games constitute part of the play for the Hobey Baker Memorial Trophy and also count in the reckoning of standing the Quadrangular League.

Thomas Rushes Back to Drill Alabama

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Dec. 2 (INS) [illegible] over his team's selection [illegible] in the Rose Bowl, Coach Frank Thomas has returned to the Alabama campus to begin drills Monday for the New Year's football classic.

Thomas had gone north to see the Southern California Notre Dame game and was scheduled to speak at a Bob Zuppke banquet in Chicago tonight. He hastened home, however, when advised of his team's selection.

"Alabama has always looked on an invitation to the Rose Bowl as the greatest honor that can come to a football team," Coach Thomas said.

It will be Alabama's fifth trip to the Rose Bowl, and it has yet to be beaten there. In four previous Rose Bowl games, the Crimson Tide has won three and tied one.

Holland, Frank said, was the most outstanding lineman Yale faced all season.

Jimmy Wilde returned to Wales following the loss of his title to Villa. He occasionally makes a trip to London to take in a major boxing match. Wilde, like most of the English, Scotch and Welsh boxers, was frugal, and saved a sizable share of his tremendous ring earnings.

GEORGE FREEMAN, who has been close to the boxing game for a great many years, tells me he considers Bob Conley of South Boston one of the finest looking boxers to get into the All-Eastern finals.

"Conley is a natural boxer," said Freeman. "He is always in position to punch, while he is difficult to hit. Conley will compete in the 160-pound division on Monday night, and I feel confident he will make a creditable showing."

Neil Doherty of Brookline who will show in the light heavyweight class, dropped in at this office on his way to the gym. Neil is in fine condition, and I look for him to make an impressive showing when he clashes with the leading boxers from New York, Washington, Baltimore, Syracuse and Albany in the All-Eastern finals on next Monday night.

Frank Chludinski, giant Hyde Park heavyweight, has been a long time smashing his way out front in the heavyweight division. Two years ago Chludinski was one of the most sought after heavyweights in the East. He then ran into Yancy Henry in amateur boxing competition, and didn't fare so well.

Chludinski, six feet three inches tall and weighing 220 pounds, has terrific power. He always could hit, but was weak at boxing.

The big fellow has finally mastered the art of boxing. He moves around the ring at a lively clip, while he punches from all angles.

In defeating Prendable, Chludinski displayed plenty of speed, an exceptionally good left hand and a heavy right hand sock. It looks as if the Hyde Park giant now that he has found himself in a fistic way, will make a stout hearted bid for honors in the heavyweight class at the All-Eastern finals at the Garden on Monday night.

I still have a weakness for watching heavyweight matches and am eagerly looking forward to see the heavyweight action in the All-America show.

Holy Cross Star On Road to Recovery

WORCESTER, Dec. 2 (AP) St. Vincent Hospital authorities said today the condition of Eddie O'Melia, star Holy Cross football player, who was operated on last night for appendicitis, was "as good as could be expected today."

SKI HEIL—Winter sports enthusiasts have started making those now famous races against Father Time in order that they might have more hours for skiing. To date the A. M. C. hut at Pinkham Notch has been besieged by hundreds who ask only one question, "Is the carriage road skiable?" Joe Dodge's reply is something for the books, and his circle of admirers is ever on the increase.

Every regional association is on its toes, completing programs for your appreciation. The Belknap Mountains Recreational Center is yours for the asking. Captain Edward L. Lydiard, the development director, has done an outstanding job of setting a series of events for the coming winter season.

This region will be the mecca for thousands of winter sport enthusiasts, for you will find a most complete winter sports area where it is possible to ski up hill and down dale, or try your skill on a Slalom slope that will rank with the skier as a real test.

THIS REGION is now famous for the events of last year. Thousands were on hand to witness the championship jumps of the United States Eastern Association. The hill itself has been much improved, it is graded to a finished profile and has been sodded, in order that the rain storms will not ruin the work of the past four years.

For your approval, the latest is a new deluxe chair line tramway, similar to the one at Sun Valley, and the only one of its kind in the east. The land has bee ncleared to the top of the mountain, and it is now possible to travel to the top on one side of the mountain and ski down the other.

The Slalom is now over 3800 feet in length, and varies in width from 200 to 800 feet, with a pitch of from 12 to 30 degrees, a real test. Another fine piece of work for the area has been done in the finishing of the arena at the base of the jump. This has been built in the form of terraces, and will handle over 4000 people at one meet.

This region is fast coming to the top as one of the best in the northeast, and with the traveling time not too far from Boston, the winter sports fans will find that the slogan, "More Hours for Skiing," is something to keep in mind.

THE EASTERN SLOPE REGION now boasts some of the finest trails in the country. New tramways and many new slopes will greet the visitor.

The Eastern Slope Ski Club has a room at the Eastern Slopes Inn, at No. Conway, N. H., and from the reports the club is hitting on all eight, and is ready for the thousands who will travel the highways this winter in search of real skiing.

The town of Jackson is ever the favorite of the skier, with the many slopes that are now in fine condition, and the reports read that they have a number of new trails cleared which will test the skill of a [illegible]

Chuck Emerson, who holds out at the inn which now bears his name, has stopped all traffic north with his sign that can be seen for miles telling the world that his slopes are ready.

The whole project will be flood lighted this year and will be one of the popular spots of this season.

The main reason for the rapid jump into the limelight of the region is that Carroll Reed has ready for the many who will visit and study at the famous American branch of the Hannes Schneider Ski School at St. Anton, Arlberg, Austria, the same group of instructors who pleased thousands last year. The only difference this season is that a number of the American-born fellows have had a few months' lessons from the master himself, and now will present for your approval, a more finished technique in teaching.

THERE HAVE BEEN MANY CHANGES in the skiing picture in the past few months. Our old friend, Fred Nachbaur, has got an Inn in the Belknaps. Charles Proctor is building a trail and slope which will be one of the best in the state. He now calls the region of Plymouth, N. H., his stamping ground. Norwood Cox is the new head coach of Harvard's ski team.

Western Massachusetts has ready for your approval some of the finest skiing slopes and trails to be found. The Mount Greylock ski club is even now sending in reports of heavy frosts, and that, my friends, means a good winter, for skiing.

AT MONTPELIER, VT., this week Attorney General Lawrence C. Jones drawn into controversy arising on the arrest of Bellows Falls theater manager for violating an ancient Blue Law which prohibits practically all occupations and amusements on Sunday, stated that if admissions were paid at ski places on Sunday it was contrary to the law and, therefore, not permissible.

Various interested bodies who have been associated with development of publicity of Winter Sports throughout the State were particularly aroused after contemplating the possibilities dormant in this affair.

Trade Hysteria Subsiding in Eastern Half

Recent Developments Is Restoring Confidence

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
International News Service Financial Writer

NEW YORK, Dec. 2—Observations during a swing around the eastern half of the United States indicate that the hysteria in business circles is subsiding.

The second was distrust of the New Deal by numerous financiers, investors and executives. This lack of confidence tended to make unsympathetic observers put the worst possible interpretation on current unfavorable developments.

AMELIORATIVE FACTORS

Meantime, ameliorative factors are already at work.

First, after making a double bottom, securities have shown some resistance. Moreover, there is widespread recognition that the collapse in security prices was induced by "special" factors, resulting in reduced liquidity. The record showed that while federal regulation had been placing unusual restrictions on buying short selling went on during the panic in large volume.

Second, the change of pace of the administration, as revealed by President Roosevelt and Secretary Morgenthau, holds out the trade building prospect of internal economic peace.

Third, this atmosphere of harmony has been further developed by the recent statement by the American Federation of Labor that union members, with satisfactory collective bargaining agreements, should co-operate "to cut costs by improving efficiency." Likewise, John L. Lewis, chairman of the CIO, in his interview with Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, editor and publisher of the Washington Herald and Times, emphasized the value of profit motive, pointing out:

"What we have learned long ago, in the United Mine Workers, is that the miners cannot make money unless the mine owners are making money."

Fourth, the immediate cause of the current recession, namely excessive inventories caused by forward buying earlier in the year when there were fears of shortages and still higher prices, is being rapidly corrected by heavy fall consumption of merchandise, with subnormal replacements in primary markets.

Fifth, the disturbance to conditions of a balanced internal economy, which was threatened by the collapse in cotton, corn and certain other farm prices since midsummer, may be remedied by pending new agricultural legislation.

PROFITS TAX

Sixth, the business restricting punitive undivided corporate profits tax has been slated for revision, as has been the transaction halting capital gains federal impost.

Seventh, President Roosevelt's efforts to seek a new rapprochement with the electrical utility industry has already resulted in some new commitments for substantial capital expenditures.

Eighth, the recent increases in rail freight and passenger rates (the latter in the South) are steps to avert railroad bankruptcy, and, if followed up, are likely to bolster up railroad purchasing power for heavy durable goods.

Ninth, new emphasis on a guaranteed annual wage to construction workers, instead of the current exorbitant hourly rate, may break the deadlock in the building trades.

In brief, recent developments have tended to induce executives to seek to put a final date on the present sharp recession, rather than to accept the pessimistic thesis put forth by William J. Baxter in his alarming pamphlet entitled "America faces its greatest depression."

Food Machinery Has Larger Profit

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 2—Food Machinery Corporation, for the fiscal year ended September 30, 1937, reports net profit of $1,854,469 after all charges including surtax on undistributed profits, equivalent after preferred dividends to $4.10 per share on 426,633 common shares outstanding.

This compares with net profit of $1,359,965 for the preceding fiscal year, equivalent to $3.33 per share on 384,444 common shares. Full year's dividends on the present issue of 40,000 preferred shares were earned 10.3 times.

Sales for the year ended September 30, 1937 aggregated $10,721,305, an increase of 40 per cent over the $7,653,026 reported for 1936. Increase in machinery sales was greater than in any other year in the company's history, and total sales surpassed all previous records.

Rail Labor Urges Rate Increase

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (INS)—Railroads seeking a freight rate increase before the Interstate Commerce Commission have the whole hearted support of their employes, declared a statement issued today by George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, freight handlers, express and station employees.

Although the union does not, because of its character, formally join in the railroads' application, it is convinced that only through granting of this plea can the roads live and prosper, said the statement. Prices in other industries have gone up, declared the statement.

Chamber Cites Trade Gains

A marked upward trend in business activities in the Boston area and substantial employment gains during the past month were reported today by the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

Although the November increases moved more slowly than similar gains in past months, M. D. Liming, executive secretary of the chamber, announced that a survey revealed several new enterprises and a number of important expansions.

Thirteen expansions in established firms also raised the total of business firms which have increased their facilities to more than 100.

At the same time, Liming reported that these factors have resulted in jobs for more than 3000 workers in this district.

First National Stores

New York Curb Exchange has removed from unlisted trading First National Stores, Inc., 7 per cent first preferred stock, par $100. This issue has been called for redemption January 3 at $110.

Treasury's Dec. Financing

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (INS)—The Treasury will engage in a refinancing program involving the borrowing of almost a billion dollars over the next two-month period, Secretary Morgenthau announced today.

The initial stages will not involve any new money, but is for refinancing of maturing obligations.

On December 15, the Treasury will float $450,000,000 in securities to pay off a like amount in maturing securities. At the same time, holders of $277,000,000 in 2⅝ notes that mature in February will be permitted to take part of the new issue.

Beginning December 20, the Treasury will offer short term bills to the amount of $50,000,000 weekly, and that amount may be stepped up to $100,000,000 a week later, depending upon the Treasury's cash position.

In addition to paying off in cash the $450,000,000 maturities, the Treasury also will pay out $165,000,000 in interest payments on the public debt. This interest is due December 15.

Morgenthau said it will not be necessary to de-sterilize gold in December in view of the new refinancing program. He declined to state, however, what the Treasury's policy would be regarding release of gold from its sterilized stocks after December.

Liberal, Radical Explained by Lewis Haney

Tells Why It's Important to Grasp Meaning

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University.)

NEW YORK, Dec. 2—It is highly important just now to get and hold a correct idea of the meaning of "liberalism." Especially is it important to understand the difference between liberalism and radicalism.

There are exactly two big practical reasons why this is so important:

(1) The first reason is that so much radicalism still lurks in the Washington administration that its recent moves to stimulate business are jeopardized.

(2) The second reason is that so many business men don't know the difference, that they are in danger of opposing some of the very fundamentals of business.

THE DIFFERENCE

A liberal is one who believes in evolutionary (not revolutionary) changes, according to principles established by reason and based upon experience. He would retain existing social institutions as long as they can be made to contribute to the greatest good of the greatest number.

A radical believes in revolution, and accepts extreme and untested theories of social reform—

For example, is a senator a radical who wants the anti-trust law enforced, and who attacks Mr. Roosevelt for not pushing the enforcement of that law? Certainly not. The anti-trust law is a basic principle of American business, under which private trade and industry have thrived.

If a desire to break up unnecessary monopolies and artificial price maintenance is all there is against a congressman, he may be a conservative. Certainly he is no radical.

But when a federal legislator favors a scheme of federal "social planning" such as the NRA or the AAA, and when he attacks the Supreme Court for upholding the rights of property and contract, he is a radical.

If he knowingly favors federal relief of the WPA and PWA sort on the ground that they will increase the power of the central government and regiment the people, he is a radical.

If he wants to have greenbacks or to seize the banks so that the federal government can make them handle its deficit financing, and if he wants to do this for the purpose of increasing the government's activity in controlling business, he is a radical.

All this is radicalism because it means a revolution in our social institutions—an overthrow of individual rights and initiative.

BUSINESS NEEDS

As long as the New Deal exists and the administration holds to its radical "reforms," it will fail to get business "recovery." It will be unable to get private enterprise to pull the chestnuts of a building boom out of the fire!

Business doesn't need more credit. Business needs to be freed of political control.

Now for the business man's danger: It is that he tends to fight three sound and conservative economic policies. These are: Anti-trust laws, the "prudent investor" (or original cost) theory of utility valuation, and collective bargaining with labor.

(1)—The principle of fair competition is the life blood of business. Nothing will more certainly and swiftly kill business than monopoly. Business men must accept and DEFEND the principle of the anti-trust laws.

(2)—The surest way to encourage and support private capital is to adopt the principle that capital which is honestly and with reasonable prudence actually invested, is entitled to public recognition and to the right to earn interest.

(3)—No surer way exists to establish the sanctity of contract and property rights, and to insure legal responsibility on BOTH sides than to accept the principle of collective bargaining with labor.

World's Tin Supply Lower

World's visible supply of tin at the end of November totaled 18,067 tons, accoding to W. H. Gartsen's estimate. Straits and Arnhem smelter carryover as of November 30 totaled 5260 tons.

Plymouth Cordage Quarter Dividends

At the annual meeting of Plymouth Cordage Company stockholders, directors were re-elected. The officers were also re-elected.

Directors declared regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share on the $100 par stock and 12½ cents a share on the $10 par employes special stock, both payable January 20, 1938, to stock of record December 31, 1937.

Terriers Having Trouble Making 1938 Schedule

By Associated Press)

Having elevated the Terriers from the depths—they won only four games in the four years preceding the Hanley regime—up to a ranking of national respectability with 20 victories, eight defeats and four ties from 1934 through 1937, Hanley finds some opponents balk at renewing contracts.

"Of the seven teams we played in 1934, my first year here, Boston College was the only club we played again this year," grinned Hanley, who came here from Northwestern where he was line coach under his brother Dick.

It wasn't so many years ago that B. U. was known far and wide as a doormat for colleges wanting a "breather" before a hard game.

CONDITIONS DIFFERENT

But now it's different. The best Terrier team in history claimed a successful season by toppling Boston College, 13 to 6, for the first time since they began playing.

Gil Dobie, Eagles' coach, said "B. U. was the best team we faced all year," and to that was added the assent of Clipper Smith, coach of undefeated Villanova, one of the two elevens to beat B. U.

"It's no secret," Hanley smiled. "We used the Warner system of playing sound football, backed up with experienced coaching. We had a very fine team spirit, and we worked the boys with mechanical apparatus, not by letting them whack each other silly.

"And we don't believe in Saturday oratory. Games are won Mondays and Tuesdays, not Saturdays."

REAL HUSTLER

Where, they ask, is there a coach who must canvas alumni and friends for finances to buy food for the players' training table? Where is it necessary for a player to travel 15 miles to practice? And where is there a school of comparative size that works with as poor and as little equipment?

These disadvantages will be corrected, Hanley believes, although he declined to speculate on his future at B. U.

"I don't know yet what my plans are for the future, but I'd sure like to stay here until we reach the stage where we'll be playing some Big Ten team or are able to bring to Boston a team like Notre Dame. But coaching is a precarious job."

Tap's Tips

Harry Mehre Quits Georgia Grid Post

ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 2 (INS)—Harry Mehre head football coach at the University of Georgia, had resigned today, and Georgia immediately began casting about for a successor.

Mehre, in his letter of resignation to Dr. W. Q. Payne, chairman of the athletic board, stated simply that he "felt forced to resign under present conditions." The resignation is effective January 1.

Skiing Minor Sport

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Dec. 2—Syracuse University has made skiing a minor sport with Gunnar Peterson, senior from Pittsfield, Mass., as student manager.

Medwick, Martin To Remain With Cards

MILWAUKEE, Dec. 2 (AP)—If there was a price tag on Joe Medwick of the St. Louis Cardinals it would read $1,000,000 plus.

That's the value Branch Rickey, Cardinal chieftain, put on the heavy-hitting outfield star today. And to lay low the stubborn rumor that Medwick would be sold during the current baseball meetings, Rickey explained that "only if we were liquidating the entire organization would Medwick be disposed of."

Between dashes to telephones and hurried looks at blackboards containing player rosters of the Cardinal farm chain, Rickey paused long enough in his hotel suite to talk about his two best-known pieces of diamond "ivory"—Medwick and the "forgotten man"—Dizzy Dean.

MEDWICK TO STAY

"Medwick is not for sale and will not be traded," Rickey said. "If someone walked in that door and offered me $500,000 for him I'd say 'No'; they could make the price go beyond a million dollars and my answer still would be 'No.' Offers have been made for him, but they were made rather facetiously and those making the offers knew they were just talking.

"What's the sense, anyway, in selling a great ball player like Medwick, say for $500,000, and then have to give the government half. You'd just have $250,000 left to start trying to replace Medwick—and it couldn't be done."

What's going to become of "Good Ol' Diz?" Well, for one thing, Rickey is going to keep the eccentric hurler who was the biggest topic of conversation at the 1936 meetings and who apparently is forgotten this year.

HAS FAITH IN DIZ

"We still hope to get good pitching from Dizzy," Rickey continued. "We do not plan to sell or trade him. You know (with a grin) Dizzy is a great fellow. We never had any trouble with him; he's never reported late; he's always had his contract in on time. Of course, there may have been a few stories given out here and there, but they sort of entered into the spirit of the thing."

Rickey hopes to have a fair team in 1938, with help coming from the Cardinal farms. Several older stars will be retained, including John "Pepper" Martin, colorful and all-around handy man. Martin, so far as Rickey is concerned, can remain with the club for life.

N. E. Trade Conditions Are Spotty

Principal Commodity Prices Tend To Stiffen

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

New England business news is hardly studded with bright, sparkling gems of optimistic conditions in leading industries but when general trade reports are considered it does not suffer by comparison. There are in fact several indications that this section is better off than the rest of the country.

Firmer price tendencies in principal commodity marts supplied a cheerful note and a few industries continued to maintain good production rates. Both wool and cotton prices stiffened even though actual operations in the industries were slow. There is little encouragement in shoe centers where prices are uncertain and the volume of orders received for new goods is low. Even the port of Boston shipping figures reflect the poor state of trade. On a weekly comparison basis with 1936, imports are showing a moderate decline. But money is not tight as the reports on collections show, with manufacturers noting they are fairly good and wholesalers calling them fair. There is a distinct absence of depression notes with few reporting agencies coloring their purely professional views with the panicky terms so familiar in the early 1930's.

WASHINGTON POINTERS

Washington continues to supply a hopeful note insofar as future relations with the business and financial world are concerned. Secretary of Commerce Roper has taken up the pleasant task of reassuring business men. Last night he told a Chicago audience that there is need for a general revision of federal taxes. All know that the burden, in the aggregate, can not be lightened appreciably, but better distribution of it is entirely possible and it is good to hear an official of the administration admit it. The secretary also touched on utilities and railroads. The financial district took kindly to his comments on a needed rate increase and the necessity for a clearly-defined utility policy.

* * *

The executive branch is not alone in encouraging business to take heart. Over in the Senate there is a move to modify the utility "death sentence" even though reports have it that the administration is not ready to accept all recommendations of Commonwealth & Southern's Wilkie. But by inference it is a decided novelty to have any recommendations of a utility leader meet with approval in political circles.

* * *

SELLING DRIES UP

While one session hardly makes a trend that of Wednesday contained a most significant characteristic in the opinion of tape followers. Selling dried up on the downside in market fashion. It represented a bullish development of the first water. And as long as such a condition prevails buying on dips will be encouraged and the outlook for a final smashing of the long downward trend will brighten. From the standpoint of many technicians the stage is rapidly being set for a real reversal; one that will carry the averages back from 15 to 25 points.

* * *

If sellers continue to meet with failure on their sporadic sorties purchases of favorite groups should go forward in a more decisive manner than heretofore. For our part the aviations, electric equipments, rails, utilities and oils appear most promising. However, the same policy of not adding to commitments prevails, as wisdom suggests switching for those who now have rather full portfolios.

Stocks Improve Slightly From Early Low Prices

Budget Balance Will Accelerate Current Dip

While the Federal deficit during the first four months of the current fiscal year amounted to only $562,000,000 as compared with $938,000,000 in the same period last year, this year's deficit was only $333,000,000 less than the deficit of $985,000,000 anticipated in the budget for the entire present fiscal year, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

It is thus apparent that the government must keep its income and outgo practically in balance during the last eight months if the budget estimate of the deficit is to be realized.

If the government accomplishes this, the effect will be deflationary since actually there will be more money coming in than going out. The chief reason for this is that the figure on expenditures includes money which will be placed in the Social Security trust funds.

The prospect is, however, that expenditures will exceed receipts during the remainder of the year despite the government's expressed intentions of striving for a balanced budget. As the result of the current business recession, receipts will tend to fall while expenditures are very likely to increase. It is not probable that the government can resist with much success growing demands for financial aid.

It is doubtful whether the government will take any action to change this situation by raising taxes. Considerable pressure is now being brought to bear on Congress for a revision of the tax on undistributed profits.

If income from this source is reduced, the government will find it difficult to impose even sufficient taxation in some other direction to provide an offset in view of the prospect that the present resistance to more taxes will tend to increase with the curtailment of general business.

GOVERNMENT OUTLOOK

The outlook is, therefore, that the government will continue to borrow. This, however, will not adversely affect the economic situation in the immediate future despite the opinion now prevailing in many quarters that the balancing of the federal budget would result in a revival of business.

Business at the present time is being carried on at a greatly inflated level created to a considerable extent by government borrowing during the past several years. An elimination of government borrowing would remove one of the chief supports of this inflated structure.

Its collapse would involve a more rapid fall in the national income than in the price level, a consequent curtailment of production with an increase in unemployment and a general economic depression.

While a balancing of the federal budget would not, therefore, contribute to an immediate business revival, but would, on the contrary, accelerate the current recession, a balancing of the budget would, in the long run, be worth much more than the price of a temporary slump.

While government borrowing would aid in checking the present recession, it would mean a closer approach to the collapse of federal credit and such chaotic economic conditions that even the 1929-1932 catastrophe would, in retrospect, seem like a mild recession.

Consequently, the present prospect of continued borrowing by the government is not a welcome one even though it means better conditions during the coming year than those which would otherwise prevail.

B. & M.-Me. Central Gross Is Lower

Gross revenues of Maine Central R. R. in November were about 11 per cent below November, 1936, according to President French. Revenues of Boston & Maine suffered a much more severe decline, he said, although the exact figure was not available.

Mr. French believed Maine Central would have net income for 1937 substantially in excess of $400,000. Boston & Maine, he said, is expected to cover all its charges.

Mr. French said the business recession in New England has gained impetus on the downturn, and that he was in no position to predict when the bottom would be reached. The outlook is not at all encouraging, he said, adding that there has been a sharp slump in carloadings of his two roads which still is continuing.

Ticker Tape Is Frequently At Standstill

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (AP)—Search for rallying stimulants was generally futile in today's stock market and leading issues yielded as much as 2 points or so.

While support entered the list near the fourth hour, with steels erasing part of early losses, the come-back was on exceptionally small volume. The ticker tape frequently was motionless.

Brokers said many traders had announced their intention of holding to neutral ground until the appearance of more definite assurances business and industry were nearing the bottom of the recession.

Clues from the bond and commodity divisions were lacking. Slipping tendencies were displayed by most. Foreign securities markets were up at the start, but failed to hold.

Down the greater part of the time were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, J. I. Case, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, Montgomery Ward, Anaconda, Kennecott, American Metal, U. S. Gypsum, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Union Pacific and Atlantic Coast Line.

WESTERN UNION SKIDS

Gold mining shares were again in fair demand, McIntyre, Dome and Alaska Juneau edging forward. Resistant also were Lone Star Cement, Loew's and Goodyear.

Automotive issues were confronted with reports of slackening sales from General Motors and the probability of further ouput curtailment over the next few months, with more lay-offs. At the same time, Vice-President Mooney, returning from abroad, said overseas sales were running 25 per cent ahead of 1936.

Interest was shown in Secretary Roper's speech advocating broad revision in taxes, but Wall Street's hopes regarding alteration of the corporate surplus and capital gains levies at this session of Congress continued to wane. In addition little comfort was derived from the renewal of the drive to pass the wage-hour bill.

The New York wool top exchange service revealed consumption of apparel wools in October dropped to the lowest for this month since 1918.

CURRENT TOPICS

Among the factors tending to cloud the market picture were estimates the new coal prices ordered by the bituminous coal commission, effective December 16, will boost industrial costs by some $40,000,000 or more a year.

It was pointed out, though, that the annual production loss to mining operators has been running around $41,000,000 for the past several years.

Holders of rail equipment shares noted forecasts of carrier executives that, in the event that they are permitted to hoist freight charges the roads will be in position to purchase 100,000 freight cars and 2000 locomotives a year.

At the beginning of foreign exchange transactions sterling was up ⅛ of a cent at $4.99¼ and the French franc was 00¼ of a cent higher at 3.39¼ cents.

Rail Employment Off in September

An I. C. C. survey showed 1,133,003 persons employed on class one railways during September, compared with 1,162,764 in August.

Two New Moves By Washington Raise Doubts

By B. C. FORBES

Snooping. That is what is suggested by two new moves at Washington:

The Treasury Department's extraordinary and wholly unexpected nosing into the "net worth" of individuals of large income; the introduction of a bill in the Senate which calls for every business concern doing interstate business to take out a Federal license, revocable at the whim of bureaucrats.

Secretary Morgenthau has unleashed his sleuths, without citing his authority, to ferret into every conceivable kind of possessions held by citizens having a net income of $100,000 a year or more! No official announcement of this wholly un-American action was vouchsafed by Treasury officials. Not only was this amazing proposal never sanctioned by Congress, but was never even laid before it.

SECRECY NECESSARY

Presumably Secretary Morgenthau, and whoever gave him his orders, felt that secrecy was extremely advisable, extremely necessary. If so, they had the right idea. It is incomprehensible that "sovereign citizens" of this democracy will quietly submit to such high-handed snooping by bureaucrats without having received express sanction from our federal lawmakers.

Here are specimens of the information citizens are peremptorily ordered to uncover to the Treasury—and, if precedent be followed, to uncover to everybody in the land: Cash; accounts and notes receivable; all securities owned, including those from which income is supposed to be tax exempt; mortgages; real estate; non-business property such as residence, autos, yachts, etc.; partnership interests; joint ventures; leases; syndicates; business property not falling under any of the other headings; and other assets, to be valued at cost.

SENATORIAL SPONSORS

It is perhaps significant that the Senatorial sponsors of the measure to license business enterprises, Messrs. William E. Borah, Joseph C. O'Mahoney, represent states in which hardly any business concerns have been able to grow to impressive dimensions, Idaho and Wyoming.

Wyoming business enterprises have the distinction of paying less in Federal corporation taxes than those of any other state in the Union—$270,170.75, contrasted with New York state's contribution of $203,340,097.40.

Senator Borah's state, with its total corporation tax payments of $775,151.51—these figures all are for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1936—ranks below all but seven states—Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Dakota, Vermont, Wyoming.

SENATOR COUZENS

Somehow, this reminds me of the late Senator Couzens' persistent shouting for higher and higher income tax surcharges when he had his own huge fortune invested in tax-exempt securities. He had nothing to lose through soaking wealthy individuals less skilled in the art of tax dodging.

How do these two moves by the treasury and in the Senate harmonize with the administration's proclaimed conciliatory attitude toward industry and the employing classes?

Do they foster suspicion that the powers-that-be at Washington have undergone no change of heart or principle whatsoever, but are merely seeking to trim their sails for the moment in accordance with the direction in which public sentiment is now blowing?

Boston & Maine Head Urges Rate Increase

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (INS)—Railroads resumed their battle for a 15 per cent freight rate increase before the Interstate Commerce Commission today.

Edward S. French, president of the Boston & Maine, as have other carrier heads, told the commission the roads are confronted with an emergency which necessitated immediate increase in revenues through higher freight and passenger charges.

French said that while his road has covered its fixed charges in recent years, except in 1936, when the expenses were abnormal on account of floods, the discontinuance of the emergency charges on freight rates, the increase in wages, prices of materials, pensions and social security taxes, present a serious problem.

This, he said, has been intensified by a sharp decline in freight traffic since the middle of the year. Usually, he added, the Fall months produce the largest amounts of net revenues, but this year, the fall months ending with November will show a substantial deficit, although for the year the fixed charges it is expected, will be covered.

This emergency, he stated, can be met only by drastic curtailments of purchases and in the number of employes, or by an increase in rates. If an increase in rates is granted, it may be possible to avoid these alternatives and keep the railroad solvent.

The Boston and Maine, in line with railroads generally, is facing an emergency which requires an immediate remedy, French added. The severity of the emergency is constantly increasing and prompt relief is imperative, he said.

Banks to Finance W. U. Refunding

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (AP)—Western Union Telegraph Co. has arranged bank borrowings to meet maturity of $8,745,000 collateral Trust 5 per cent bonds on January 1, 1938, it was disclosed today.

G. A. Hunter, treasurer, told the Public Service Commission the Chase National Bank and Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., would make a loan of $8,500,000 due within three years at interest ranging from 1 per cent to 2½ per cent over the prevailing rediscount rate of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. That rate at present is 1 per cent.

Gofkauf Group Holds Dance

Employes of the southern and central zones and employes of the central office and warehouse of Gofkauf's Automotive Stores, Inc., held a party and dance in the Venetian room of the Copley Square Hotel last evening.

The Gofkauf organization, founded 10 years ago by Herman Gofman, president, and Murry Kaufman, treasurer, with one store and only five employes, today has an organization of approximately 500 employes with 37 company stores and 50 individually owned associate stores.

The Gofkauf organization is noted for its ability to buy and sell high quality merchandise at the lowest possible prices. Each store carries approximately 5000 items of merchandise. Factors which have been instrumental in the remarkable growth of the Gofkauf organization are the experience and loyalty of its employes and the Gofkauf creed "that you can buy the best at the cheapest price at Gofkauf's backed by a money-back guarantee."

Periodically, during each year the employes meet for outings, bowling and other social contacts, to which they invite executives and friends of the company.

'Jefferson' Library Asked by Treadway

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (INS)—A resolution to name the Congressional Library the "Thomas Jefferson Memorial," in honor of President Jefferson, whose books were the nucleus of the great library, was introduced in the House today by Representative Treadway (R.) of Massachusetts.

Medal Awarded E. Boston Hero

Francis W. Carbon, 34, of Summer street, East Boston, has been awarded the William Penn Harding medal, highest award of the Massachusetts Humane Society.

Carbon, a rigger, climbed a greasy wire cable to the aid of Harnden, who was trapped in heavy smoke on a beam crane 60 feet above the decks of a steamer.

After a heroic struggle, in which he bore aloft a rope, Carbon succeeded in lowering his fellow worker to safety.

"I knew something had to be done so I just did it," was Carbon's explanation.

German Music Set For Third Concert

Music of three great German composers, Bach, Beethoven and Wagner, will feature the third of the series of "national music" concerts to be presented Sunday by the State Symphony Orchestra at Sanders Theater, Harvard University, it was announced today.

Alexander Thiede will conduct the orchestra. It will omit the scheduled December 13 Sanders Theater concert because it is preparing to appear for a special presentation the next day in Jordan Hall under the baton of National Director Dr. Nikolai Sokoloff. Francesco Zecchino, noted boy violinist, will be soloist.

Yellow Jack Shuts Port

ASUNCION, Paraguay, Dec. 2 (INS)—Due to an epidemic of yellow fever, all ports in Paraguay were closed today.

+ Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men do to you do ye even so to them, for this is the law and the prophets.—St. Matthew VII., 12. +

The text for today is suggested by the Rev. Dr. Carl H. Horan, Unitarian minister, Brewster. The text for tomorrow will be suggested by the Rev. Harold W. Arthur, Baptist minister, Somerville.

The Editor Says:

BUREAUCRACY always begins with the delegation of powers by legislative assemblies to executives, and then by executives to POLITICAL-MINDED bureau chiefs.

In this way, subtly, slowly sometimes, but always SURELY, a people suddenly find themselves ruled by miscellaneous and unknown faces that peer at them through iron window-gratings instead of by their representatives "in Congress assembled."

The following striking instance of the tendency of our government toward this dangerous form of Fascist and Communistic-born bureaucracy appeared the other day in the Hearst papers from the pen of George Rothwell Brown, Washington correspondent of those papers.

It refers to the Trade Agreement Act of June 12, 1934. Mr. Brown says:

"The President delegates the power Congress surrendered to him to Mr. Hull. Mr. Hull delegates it to Francis Sayre, Woodrow Wilson's son-in-law, who was suckled on the League of Nations pap bottle. Sayre delegates it to obscure subordinates."

Here we have seventeen reciprocity trade treaties, of vital importance to every American industrialist, business man and workingman, that are now in the hands of men NOBODY KNOWS, men not responsible to the electorate, and men who, for all the American people know—

MAY BE INCOMPETENT.

To delegate this right to the President under the thin mask that, these being reciprocity treaties, the President and the Senate have constitutional treaty-making powers, is nothing less than a violation of the SPIRIT and the LETTER of the Constitution.

But these delegated tariff-making rights have not remained in the hands of even the President and the Secretary of State, as Mr. Brown points out.

They have become the plaything of obscure bureau chiefs—the result being that we now not only have an adverse trade balance to fight but are threatened with all the ills of FREE TRADE and BUREAUCRATIC TRADE DICTATORSHIP.

BETTER HIGHWAYS

—is the slogan of motorists who have formed a new organization, called the Massachusetts Users' Conference. Their first endeavor will be a constitutional amendment requiring all automobile and gasoline tax revenue to be spent on roads.

"Safety demands the use of all gasoline tax money and registration receipts for highways. The results of misusing road funds are evident when you consider that out of more than 8000 miles of State highways there are less than a hundred miles of modern multi-lane roads."

Mr. Keefe's argument is sound and it should appeal strongly to most people. Our highways must keep pace with the improvement in automobiles. But they will never do this so long as the motorists' money is used to pay salaries and finance departments not even remotely conected with roads.

"RESTORE LOST JOBS"

—says the Boston Chamber of Commerce Committee on Federal Taxation and Expenditures in a vigorous communication addressed to the present session of Congress.

The Committee calls for immediate repeal of the so-called Undistributed Profits Tax, pointing out that this measure is actually a penalty imposed on industries which strive to expand and create employment for thousands now jobless.

We agree with the Committee; it is foolhardy to compel a business or industry deliberately to stunt its growth. Had this ridiculous tax been adopted in George Washington's day, we'd probably be still riding in ox-carts and reading by candlelight.

The government ought to encourage prosperity and induce businessmen to hire more workers. As the Committee says, we should not commit "economic suicide."

TIME MOVES BACK

—and Hamilton, Ipswich and surrounding towns re-enact the pageantry that 150 years ago started a sturdy band of pioneers on the long and tedious overland trek to the Northwest Territory, now the Middle West.

An outstanding event of the celebration is the departure of thirty-six young college men for Ohio. They will travel in a covered wagon, drawn by a yoke of oxen. And, in costume and mode of life, they endeavor to be the reincarnations of the trail blazers of 1787.

This celebration is important; we should not fail to see that. It cites for the rest of the country the part that New England played in making America the great nation it is. At times other states have been inclined to be forgetful. Consequently a little, gentle reminding is not out of order.

Congress Can Unlock the Gate

By Nelson Harding

Democratic Party leaders in Congress insist that the Special Session can do nothing to relieve Industry of the confiscatory tax burden and thus help stem the recession.

Congress can IMMEDIATELY rescind the rapacious undistributed surplus tax, and modify the stifling capital gains tax.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.

THE last of the Broadway play boys, Tommy Manville, is beginning to show the inevitable wear and tear of time. "Boy" is a misnomer for Manville is gray haired. Also he is stooped and there is the tired look of the boulevardier in his eyes.

His inherited fortune of several millions has been lavished—or at least the heavy income therefrom—on the showy type of high blondes. The wide-eyed gimme girls who decorate the floor shows of the cabarets. To many such the asbestos hair has been a generous Santa Claus.

Apparently he can go just so long without making the headlines and then by some particularly fancy dido will land kerplunk on Page 1 of the tabloids. He is in his early 40's, but looks much older—frivoling around the white lights sometimes does that.

Among standard vaudeville acts, the never-changing routine of the tramp bicyclist, Joe Jackson, has always interested me. His routine is a model of timing. Not many, outside his agent and fellow performers, know Jackson without make-up. When not wandering the world he lives in almost hermit fashion at Greenwood Lakes, N. Y.

In the beginning he was the champion bicyclist of Europe, having migrated from Australia. His relaxation is the camera, mostly snapshots of outdoor scenes. Jackson has strange hunches. Such, for instance, as taking out his wallet in Berlin to pay for passage on the ill-fated Hindenburg and suddenly canceling his ticket and, for no reason he could understand, walking away.

In the Cincinnati salad days I lodged at The Gerdes, a theatrical hotel patronized largely by vaudeville troupers. A clannish lot, they expanded among themselves over beer and sandwiches after the night show. Their talk centered mostly on New York and that valhalla of variety—The Palace. A night clerk named Gus, a Mr. Hoggenheimer come to life was on easy familiarity with all and I noted that when he went to the opening Sunday matinee performers played to him.

They are learning gradually how to pronounce the Alfred Lunt-Lynn Fontanne play "Amphitryon 38." The correct version is am-fi-tree-un with accent on the fit. Thus, with a little smother of erudition and a Theater Guild mask, do the Lunts do some of their rather bawdy capering under the guise of high art. The trick of the Lunts' popularity with the prim and precise, plus of course a certain histrionic talent, is in their solid domesticity.

When I want to impress folk from back yonder with a certain metropolitan dash of heigh-ho I jockey them by the private mansions of John D. Rockefeller and J. P. Morgan. And illustrate how, if one hesitates before such citadels very long, private guards will pop out from nowhere and saunter up, ready to shuck the stranger of a bomb or what-have-you. I profess to know many such tricks, but in reality it is the only one in my repertoire.

Thingumbobs: Sylvia Sidney, once a crack stenographer, in animated cafe conversation often jots down shorthand on menus . . . Seymour Hicks, London actor, likes steaming black bean soup for breakfast . . . Grantland Rice thinks up many of those dandy sports poems while indulging a morning shave . . . The Rob Wagners are off on a tour of the globe.

The conversation was waxing goofier as it went along. Someone told of a fellow he had just seen who had double pneumonia a few months ago and seemed to have grown smaller. Another inquired: "Will pneumonia shrink you?" And Harry Silvey who up to that time had said nothing, chipped in with: "It won't stretch you anyway."

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Two young thugs who attempted to rob the Southern Pacific train said they thought it would be "an easy job." The extent to which the idea that crime is easy prevails among the youth of the nation is appalling.

Director Hoover, of the G-Men, recently stated that "over 18 per cent of our present day crime is committed by persons under 21 years of age." He said that during the first nine months of this year "persons who were little more than boys and girls committed 13 per cent of our murders, 28 per cent of our robberies, 41 per cent of our burglaries, 51 per cent of our automobile thefts."

Continual emphasis upon the fact that "CRIME NEVER PAYS" may have the effect of drumming some sense into youthful heads which are so susceptive to criminal suggestions.

There is no better example of the asininity of crime from a purely dollars and cents standpoint than the recent murder of an aged recluse in Sidney, Neb. Two men who are reported to have confessed the murder, the motive for which was robbery, are said to have told officers they got only $1.25 each. Just think of that—killing a man for $1.25!

The refusal of the Ohio Supreme Court to review a case in which the Court of Appeals had reversed a lower court decision fining the editor of the Akron Times-Press for contempt for publishing the names of grand jurors in violation of a judge's orders is an important victory for freedom of the press.

Nothing could be more dangerous to the freedom of the American people than a judicial censorship of the press. Judges have plenty to do attending to their own official business without undertaking to tell newspapers that they may and may not publish.

Newspapers are the eyes and ears of the public. Their first duty is to keep their readers informed. Certainly when a grand jury is called into service in any community, the people in that community have a right to know the names of the members of that jury. There is enough secrecy connected with a grand jury probe now without attempting to keep the personnel of the jury a secret.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

NEW YORK CITY vocational schools, enrolling 42,000 boys and girls, are now teaching manners. They stress courtesy as an asset quite as important as technical skill. They open "personality classes," in which seemly behavior will be built on a foundation of the "homely virtues"—patience, tolerance, sympathetic understanding, honesty and sportsmanship.

Morris E. Siegel, director of evening and continuation schools, notes that many of his pupils will become leaders of their unions, and he strives to equip them for such leadership. He says: "College bred standards" should be an objective of the labor movement.

That sounds a bit insidious to me. My observation is that the grocer's boy, or the plumber, or the man who fixes the telephone, or the milkman is quite as courteous as the average college lad of today, and maybe more so.

But that's picking on Mr. Siegel, who, beyond question, has a thoroughly worth-while idea. As competition for good jobs and advancement increases, courtesy may well be the differential of success. A man who knows how to behave will get on with his fellows and with his boss.

In the white collar world, this is too obvious to require more than passing comment. Many an industrious and competent boy or girl is held back because of obtuseness or lack of training in the little everyday amenities of civilized business relations.

This isn't an era of calm and continuance and security—the kind of an era which breeds deference for others, and in which courtesy flowers in the heart. It ceased to be from the instant of that shot at Sarajevo in 1914.

Youngsters now up for a behavior rating grew up in those post-war years of disillusionment, when both faiths and dreams were toppling, and in the bitter depression years—"I'm out to get mine, and I don't mind sticking out my elbows or stepping on anybody's toes."

Mr. Siegel, however, is talking about educating craftsmen for labor leadership, and as a corrective for strife in organized labor. He finds he must build and condition personality.

Self-help Messiahs have worn that word pretty thin, but it still has deep and valid meaning, and it seems to me that it is highly significant that an intelligent educator invokes it just now, when the conveyor belts stretch longer and longer.

The minute division of labor in mass production most certainly irons out personality in craftsmen. Can we maintain a democracy made up of robots? Probably a stretch in Mr. Siegel's personality classes wouldn't make the CIO and the A. F. of L. drop their brickbats and fall into a brotherly embrace, but he flushes an idea here which they shouldn't miss.

They are trying to build an industrial democracy. Any kind of a democracy has to be made up of self-starters, who travel under their own steam and make their own human equations. That means not less incitement or doctrinaire leadership, but it means informed and disciplined collective action which is a component of individual intelligence and civilized behavior, which, in turn, means personality.

Hence, I think Mr. Siegel is doing an important job with his 42,000 pupils. The cartoonist will spoof him, of course—the Chesterfieldian plumber and all that. It's a natural.

But, as an occasional strap hanger, sometimes caught in a bank window line, and as one who sometimes dodges hog, on a Sunday afternoon drive—as one of these, anybody who proposes to induce more courtesy in master (man gets my vote.

March of Events

By Benjamin DeCasseres

WHEN the gods look down on earth they must sometimes let out such terrific bursts of laughter that all the lost souls down in Hades must think that the "jail is out."

For instance:

The other day in Leghorn, ITALY, the Tashkent, a 3000-ton RUSSIAN destroyer, was launched with the usual hoop-la ceremonies.

An ITALIAN flag waved from the stern of this SOVIET vessel destined to do service in the navy of an officially ATHEIST country.

When it comes to picking up a few odd pennies, these European powers hurdle their "taxes" as nimbly as a squirrel jumps a park bench for a peanut.

When writers have nothing else to do or when they are at the end of their creative powers they begin to rewrite Shakespeare.

He put lines from "Othello" in their mouths. So he cleverly dodged the charge of literary "blasphemy"—that is, putting words into the Shakespeare plays that Shakespeare did not write.

But bold, bad, blithesome Bernard Shaw says Tut! Tut! to Nathan.

So he put a lot of lines in one of the characters mouths that might have been spoken by the Duke of Windsor when he abdicated.

But Shakespeare himself anticipated the abdication of Edward the Eighth in "Richard the Second," who stepped out with a corking speech—which proves that Shakespeare, as usual, was far ahead of Messrs. Nathan and Shaw. If you don't believe it, see the UP-TO-DATE "Julius Caesar," by Shakespeare, that the Mercury Players are putting on in New York.

Japan is taking a leaf out of the book of the history of England, France and Russia—"to the victor belongs the spoils!"

She demands all of China's nominal rights in the Shanghai area. The French "concession" and the international "settlement" in Shanghai have always been admittedly Chinese territory.

These "concessions" were wrung out of China by the same methods that Japan is employing today—that is, by FORCE.

In 1854 both France and America came in on the "killing." Up until 1926 NO CHINESE were permitted to sit on the Shanghai municipal council of the International Settlement—and SHANGHAI IS A CHINESE CITY!

Now Japan is moving in, and it will only be a question of time when the international squatters in China, including Soviet Russia in Outer Mongolia and Chinese Turkestan, will be told to "Move on, boys—this is Asiatic territory!"

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

She says it proudly, almost defiantly—as one boasting of a great record and daring you to equal it. And it is obvious that she feels she should be greatly honored and rewarded for "never having a thought outside her family."

But, alas, she isn't being rewarded. That drooping, aggrieved mouth, those tear-dimmed angry eyes, tell the story. Such a common, tragic story with the 40-year-old wife!

"Nobody can say I wasn't a good mother," she cries, in that hopeless, resentful tone that has become her habit.

"I never had an interest or a thought outside my home. From the day I married, I lived just for my husband and the children when they came along. Wore myself out trying to do everything the way they liked.

"My children treat me as if I were a servant. They thought they knew more than I did before they were out of grammar school. They never confide in me—won't listen to a word of advice. They're always saying I can't understand.

"My husband, too. It's years since he asked me to go anywhere with him. He was always nagging me, too, when the youngsters were young, saying it would be good for us all if I'd leave them for a while with a hired woman. But how could I know what would be happening to them? So, of course, I didn't go.

"Now he doesn't ask me any more. And he's hardly ever at home at nights. When he is, he has his nose in a book . . . never notices me.

But has she been a good wife and mother? She says that her children think they know more than she does. But don't they?

What does she, who boasts that she "has never had an interest outside the home," know of the world in which her husband and her children live, know of the astounding changes which are taking place in that world, know of the complicated problems which they must face?

Why should her children confide in her? Why should her husband seek her companionship? What has she to give them? In all, save physical requirements, they are strangers to her.

But was that a proof of devoted love, unselfish sacrifice? Or was it a proof of her own laziness and stupidity?

Did she refuse to go to clubs and lectures, refuse to read and think and mingle with her kind because she was "so wrapped up in her family?"

Or did she refuse because thinking and reading are hard work . . . and social life challenges one's record and often exposes one's stupidity?

Did she stay at home because that was the dearest place on earth . . . or because she could be the big noise there without criticism or competition? I wonder.
